

Ex-husband Goes Money Comes Chapter 284

After all, Todd was coming. Viola didn't want to humiliate Ormand in front of others, so she signaled him to sit on the little sofa next to her.

"Go and sit."

Ormand did not move at all. He lowered his head in anger and put on a cold look. It seemed that he wanted to kill someone.

Viola remembered that Ormand had heart disease and quickly touched his cheek to calm him down.

"Listen to me and sit down. Maybe I'll prove your innocence later."

Only then did Ormand calm down and sit down on the sofa on the side.

Fifteen minutes later.

Todd came over right away.

As soon as he entered the room, he was frightened by the cold and terrifying atmosphere in the living room.

Seeing the cigarette on the coffee table, Todd seemed to understand what happened.

Todd thought that Ormand was caught by Viola so quickly and his efforts paid off.

Todd believed that he had done his job well.

Todd stood across from the coffee table quietly and happily.

When Ormand saw Todd, he even laughed.

In front of Viola, Ormand suppressed the anger in his heart and said something in a low voice.

“Viola saw the cigarette you put in the drawer. You better explain it to Viola honestly. If you dare to make a lie, I will bring you to the interrogation room tomorrow and use a lie detector and an electric prod!”

Todd never expected Ormand to be so ruthless.

Todd thought that this was different from what he had expected.

Todd thought that Ormand should be looking forward to being beaten up and be very happy.

Todd was stunned and did not dare to say a word.

Viola frowned and glared at Ormand. "Why are you threatening him?"

"I... I didn't..."

Ormand's tone instantly lowered.

Viola didn't intend to scold him. She just looked at Todd and asked in a calm tone, "Todd, answer me honestly. Did Ormand smoke today?"

Todd was stunned, subconsciously glancing at Ormand.

"An electric prod," Ormand said.

"He didn't smoke! He asked for a cigarette and threw it away after smelling it."

Viola gracefully clasped her hands, her expression indifferent. She glanced back and forth between Todd and Ormand as if she didn't believe Todd.

"Todd, don't be afraid. I am here, as long as you are telling the truth, I guarantee that Ormand won't dare to hurt you."

With Viola's guarantee, Todd sighed and raised his right hand to make an oath.

"Ms. Zumthor, I promise that every word I say is absolutely true!"

“Alright.”

Viola nodded as if she believed him.

Ormand sighed in relief.

However, before Ormand was completely relieved, he heard Viola continue to ask, “What’s the matter with the cigarettes in the drawer?”

“Mr. Caffrey asked me to buy them for him in the afternoon. He said to find a drawer and hide it.”

Viola noticed the keyword and narrowed her eyes. “Hide?”

Todd nodded. “Mr. Caffrey said that you have a lot of things to do during the day, so you don’t open the drawer often. He asked me to find a drawer in the corner and put them there so that he wouldn’t be discovered.”

Viola sneered and looked meaningfully at Ormand.

“Oh, so that’s how it is. Someone thought that he wouldn’t be discovered by mne.”

Ormand was so angry that he was about to vomit blood.

Ormand cursed Todd in his heart.

Ormand thought that he was unable to explain himself because of Todd's description

Ormand glared at Todd, grinding his teeth indifferently. "I asked you to explain, not to tell you what I said before! You came here to prove my innocence!"

It seemed like Todd had completely understood.

It turned out that Todd had misunderstood in the day and thought that Ormand was deliberately looking for trouble. It seemed that Ormand really wanted to hide what happened from Viola.

"Don't be afraid." Unlike Ormand, who was pissed, Viola smiled gently. "You've told the truth. I am here. Don't worry and tell me the entire story."

However, after knowing that he had done something wrong and hurt Ormand, Todd was not as confident as before.

Todd had to seriously ponder how to make up for his mistakes.

Otherwise, Todd thought that he would suffer.

If Ormand got angry, Viola would be unable to save him.

After pondering for a while, Todd said earnestly, "Ms. Zumthor, Mr. Caffrey was wrong to hide the cigarettes from you, but he remembered your schedule and never wanted to smoke."

"He has been taking medicine three times a day. The medicine is very bitter, and if he eats too much, he will lose his appetite and become nauseous. He wants to find a way to ease the pain after taking the medicine. He just used the wrong method!"

Todd said a lot seriously.

Ormand's gloomy expression gradually changed. Finally, he heard a few pleasant words that could help him.

Viola kept a straight face, making it hard to guess whether she believed it or not.

Todd probed, "Ms. Zumthor, please... Don't be angry at Mr. Caffrey."

After all, there was someone else here, so Viola didn't say that Ormand hid the truth from her and even tried to lie to her.

Viola looked at Ormand and smiled gently. "It's not a big deal. There's nothing to be angry about. Isn't it, Orin?"

Ormand nodded honestly.

Chapter 284 Todd's Help

Viola looked away and looked at the cigarettes on the coffee table. "But from now on, don't keep these cigarettes. They aren't good stuff. Todd, clear out the cigarettes in the drawer and sell them all at a low price."

"Low price?"

Todd widened his eyes. Those were all good-quality cigarettes imported from other countries. They were very expensive.

Todd liked the cigarettes very much. Selling them at a low price was too much of a loss. He felt heartbroken.

Ormand glanced at Todd. "Listen to Viola. Take all these cigarettes away tonight. I don't want to see these things anymore!"

Todd had a bitter expression on his face.

"Yes, Mr. Caffrey."

"Come on, let's go upstairs." Viola stood up and held Ormand's hand as Todd dealt with the cigarette.

Viola said in a calm tone, but Ormand was nervous.

Ormand thought that he finally proved his innocence, but he would still be beaten up in the room.

Ormand had mixed feelings as he allowed Viola to pull him back to the master bedroom.

“Sit down.

Ormand sat down quietly, feeling very nervous.

Ormand wasn't sure if Viola was still angry, but he knew that he hated being slapped.

If Ormand wasn't afraid that Viola would get angry, he would have long wanted to throw the ruler in the drawer and the washboard in the wardrobe away.

Just as Ormand was deep in thought, he saw Viola turn around and walk towards the bedside table. She placed her hand on the first drawer and pretended to open it.

Ormand was very clear about what was lying inside.

Without waiting for Viola to open the drawer, Ormand touched his chest and said weakly with a frown, "Viola, I... feel uncomfortable..."

Viola almost immediately ran over to check on Ormand. "You feel uncomfortable? Is it a heart attack? How could it be like this? After taking medicine for a week, you won't get sick easily."

Ormand said in a weak voice as he lowered his eyes. His handsome face was pale and he looked weak as she held him in her arms.

"You can't pretend you are fine when you get sick. I'll help you get the medicine that can suppress the pain!"

"No need!"

Viola was about to get up when someone grabbed her wrist.

Ormand was very gentle. It didn't seem that he was in pain.

As if Ormand realized that his reaction was extreme, he weakly let go of his hand and buried his head into her arms. He said in a low voice, "What I mean is, with you holding me, I feel much better..."

Viola stopped talking.

Viola lowered her head, narrowed her eyes, and quietly stared at Ormand's head. She had an idea now.

Not only did Ormand lie to Viola today and kept the truth from her, but he also started to act.

Viola wanted to let Ormand go, take the medicine in the drawer, and personally help him apply for the medicine on his knees.

It seemed that Viola had changed her mind now.
