

Ex-husband Goes Money Comes Chapter 296

However, on second thought, Willard remembered something, and his anger subsided a lot.

“Viola, John saved me when he was young, so I promised him a few things. This time, he came to beg me....”

Viola frowned. “Dad, how much have you secretly helped the Falcon family over the past few years? Moreover, Rebecca has tried to harm me many times. You don’t owe the Falcon family anymore.

“In my opinion, if Russell wants to break off the engagement, then let him do it. Do you still want him to marry a vicious woman like Rebecca to bully me?”

“As for the disaster of the Falcon family this time, you don’t have to worry about it. It’s the Falcon family’s own fortune. If they can’t make it through, no matter if the company goes bankrupt or the Falcon family is removed from the list, they are all asking for it. It has nothing to do with you.”

Willard listened calmly, thought about it seriously, and nodded in agreement.

“Alright, we’ll do as you say. Rebecca actually wants to harm you. It’s my politeness not to add to the Falcon family’s troubles this time.”

Viola smiled and nodded obediently, but she didn’t think so in her heart.

Her father and the Falcon family were even, but the grudge between her and Rebecca was impossible to resolve.

This time, the Falcon family would face the storm in all directions.

Viola praised Willard a few more times, her voice sweet, successfully calming Willard down.

Russell stood quietly, looking coldly at the scene in front of him.

Willard noticed that Russell was standing rooted to the ground. He softened his tone and said, "Russell, it's okay for you to break off the engagement, but I don't agree with you marrying that woman called Sherlyn!"

Russell heard this, and his face darkened. He was unconvinced.

"So you want to find me a new fiancée from another rich family? Marriage is a matter of a lifetime. I will choose what I like. This time, you still want to decide on my life. Impossible!"

"You! Are you trying to anger me?"

Willard's anger that had just subsided rose again.

"The identity of your little girlfriend is unknown. She is a wild child born in an orphanage, and she's poor-educated. What is the advantage of your marrying her? Do you want people to laugh at our family?"

"Advantage?"

Russell was also angry and sneered, "Do I marry a wife or buy goods? You calculated it so clearly. In the beginning, you ignored our objections and insisted on marrying Lily, a good-for-nothing woman, into the family.

"It's reasonable for you to marry a mistress. Is it wrong for me to marry a woman I love? What is the matching of social status in your eyes?"

Willard pointed at Russell with trembling hands. His chest heaved up and down violently, and he almost couldn't breathe.

"Bastard, you!"

Russell would have been slapped by Willard if not for the inconvenience of Willard's legs.

Unable to hit Russell, Willard became even angrier and shouted outside the door, "Joseph! Whip this bastard! Beat him until he admits his mistake!"

Russell had a face full of dissatisfaction and began to take the initiative to unbutton his shirt. He took off his suit.

"It is impossible for me to admit my mistake. You better kill me today, and I will return my life to you! I will not be your son anymore!"

Since more than two years ago, when Willard insisted on getting engaged to him and Rebecca, his relationship with Willard had been bad and had not eased up until now.

“How dare you!”

Willard’s eyes were blood-red, and his face was livid with anger.

Joseph hesitated and did not dare to go. “Mr. McGraw, please calm down. He...”

Willard glared at him. “Hurry up! Tie him up and beat him to death!”

“Stop!”

Viola stopped Joseph and gave Joseph a glance, signaling for him to leave.

“You also want to disobey me?”

Willard was angry and hurt, looking at his most beloved daughter.

“How could that be, Dad?”

Viola used her hand to comfort Willard’s heaving chest. Her gentle hand was like a soft cat’s paw, smoothing out his anger.

Viola tried to mediate. “Dad, Russell did say too much just now. He was upset by Rebecca. He didn’t mean to talk back to you. I apologize to you for him.”

She smiled apologetically, but she was secretly rejoicing in her heart.

Fortunately, the elders of the McGraw family were quite open-minded. They did not build a harsh family law like the Hobson family. They even had a Discipline Whip.

Otherwise, Russell would have to suffer a beating today.

With Viola’s soothing words, Willard’s breathing gradually returned to normal.

However, when he looked up, Willard saw that Russell was still taking off his shirt, as if he was provoking Willard’s dignity.

“Look at him! What’s the use of your apologizing for him? He is not convinced at all!”

Viola immediately turned around and glared at Russell. "Russell, stop messing around. It's so cold. Why aren't you putting on your clothes? If you catch a cold and get sick, Dad will be worried about you!"

Viola raised her eyebrows and winked at Russell.

Russell was stunned. With a gloomy face, he began to dress silently.

Willard snorted arrogantly. "I won't be worried. If he dies of illness, I won't be sad. It. I shouldn't have let him be born!"

Viola couldn't hold back her laughter and tried to ease the atmosphere. "Dad, what are you thinking? If it wasn't for Russell, wouldn't the order be in chaos? You wouldn't have a precious daughter like me!"

"That's right... Then, for your sake, let him go," Willard said weakly.

Viola was relieved. She knew Willard softened up. "Russell, dad is no longer angry with you. Come and thank him!"

Russell didn't reply.

Seeing that Willard was about to get angry again, Viola said, "Dad is a loving father. He never hits or scolds us siblings. There is no need to get angry with Russell this time. Maybe in a few days, Russell will understand."

Willard felt a lot better after being praised by her, and his face gradually softened.

"Russell, you have to remember that I won't harm you. I have lived to this age and experienced more than you. It is for your own good to marry a matching girl."

Russell snorted disdainfully. Just as he was about to retort, Viola quickly covered his mouth.

"Dad, leave Russell to me. I will help you persuade him!"

She grabbed Russell's arm and walked out. Viola smiled sweetly at Willard. "Then dad, excuse us!"

Russell was dragged out of the hall.

Before Viola started to talk, Russell said coldly, "Back then, you insisted on marrying into the Caffrey family, because you didn't want your life to be arranged. I'm the same. There's no room for negotiation. I definitely won't let him play things out."

"Who said I wanted to persuade you?" Viola blinked.

"Really?"

Russell continued, "You just said you would be his lobbyist."

Viola tsked and said earnestly, "My silly Russell, Dad is angry. Whatever you say to him is just asking for trouble. If you want him to agree, you have to take your time.

"You have to let him know that Sherlyn is a beautiful and kind-hearted girl. She is not the kind of scheming girl who wants to marry into a wealthy family. Think of a roundabout way to make him accept Sherlyn. This is what you should do!"
