

Ex husband Goes Money Comes Chapter 412

Viola thought, Bobby is here?

The atmosphere in the bedroom seemed to freeze up in an instant.

Viola said almost without thinking, "Just say that I'm asleep, and I don't have time to see him. I don't want to see him either. Tell him not to come again."

"OK."

Jimmy quickly left.

Sensing that Viola was in a bad mood, Ormand quickly pulled her into his arms, kissed her, and comforted her.

While Ormand was still kissing Viola, Jimmy knocked on the door again. His tone was more anxious than the last time.

"Ms. Zumthor, I have conveyed your message, but Mr. McGraw still won't leave. He is standing outside the gate in the rain. If you don't see him, he will probably stay there all night."

Jimmy didn't know what to do.

Ormand looked at the rain outside the window and said, "Maybe you should see him? The rain is cold. If he gets wet and stays outside for the whole night, he will catch a cold and a fever tomorrow."

Viola did not say anything.

After being silent for a long time, Viola said, "He wants to use this method to make me feel sorry for him and compromise. It's impossible. He is willing to be in the rain. Let him be. Don't give him an umbrella. If he can't stand it, he will leave."

"Yes, Ms. Zumthor."

After that, Jimmy didn't come to report.

Ormand looked at Viola's grave expression. He thought of Bobby outside the door and sighed silently. Ormand wanted to hold her slender waist and go to sleep, but Viola pushed his hand away with a cold face.

Ormand thought, is she venting her anger on me?

But Ormand was innocent!

"Viola, are you angry at me again?"

Viola didn't look at him. Her tone was very heavy. Bobby knew that Max harmed me, but he didn't do anything. Bobby helped her hide it from me. I can't forgive Bobby. You know me well. Why are you still speaking up for him?

Ormand lowered his eyes and gently poked her shoulder with his finger. He explained from the bottom of his heart.

"I know you well, so I know that you are angry with him because you can't stand what he did. You think he has betrayed you.

But he is your brother, who you have admired for more than twenty years. You refuse to see him and distance yourself from him. But it doesn't make you feel good. I just... don't want to see you suffer.

Viola, if he really realizes his mistake and truly regrets it, will you forgive him?"

After hearing what Ormand said, Viola fell silent for a long time.

Boom.

A clap of thunder on the horizon roused Viola from her silent thoughts.

Viola turned her back to Ormand and said indifferently, "Max pushed me into the sea when I was fifteen. If I weren't lucky, I would not be here now. I can't forget this, at least for now. I don't think he regrets it with sincerity."

From her words, Ormand could tell that there was still room for negotiation. It all depended on what Bobby did.

"Then let's watch quietly and see what Bobby will do," Ormand said in a husky voice beside Viola's ear.

Viola closed her eyes to sleep and didn't reply.

They hugged each other and slept.

The continuous rain outside the window and Bobby standing in front of the door did not affect Viola's sleep. She had been sleeping a lot since she got pregnant.

Viola slept very well that night.

In the early morning of the second day, the rain had stopped.

Viola was woken up by the light. She gently lifted the blanket and got out of bed. She stepped on the fluffy carpet barefooted.

Viola walked to the window, drew the curtain, and looked at the gate of Viorin leading to the garden.

Through the iron railing, Viola saw Bobby still standing in the distance.

Bobby didn't wear enough to keep warm as if he had specially come to suffer. Although the rain had stopped, he was still drenched. His face was very pale and his lips were slightly green.

Since childhood, Bobby had always been a tall and mighty figure in Viola's heart. He was admirable, and had never been drenched in rain or suffered this sort of punishment.

Just as Viola was thinking, a pair of warm hands wrapped around her from behind. Ormand gently put his chin on her slender shoulder and watched Bobby outside the door with her.

"Viola, are you feeling a little sorry?"

Viola did not say anything.

Ormand continued, "He hasn't left after being drenched in the rain all night. Maybe there is something urgent. Should we let him in and ask him what he wants to say? After all, he hasn't signed the inheritance agreement yet. You can't be cut off from him now."

Viola thought about it and felt that it was reasonable.

Before the matter of inheritance rights was resolved, Bobby would come to find her again and again. Therefore, it was better to know what he wanted to do.

Viola walked to the bed to get her phone. She was going to send Jimmy a message to let Bobby in.

However, just as Viola picked up his phone, it rang.

It was Toby.

Viola knew that Toby was calling to talk about Max.

So, Viola immediately answered it.

Toby said, "Ms. Zumthor, it was faining heavily last night. Max knelt for the whole night and her body couldn't take it. This morning, she had a high fever and was unconscious. Her wounds got wet and weren't treated, so they seem to become infected and fester. Should we help her?"

Viola didn't need to think about this matter. "Of course. I'll help her. Get her a doctor and cure her as soon as possible. In the future, after I finish beating people, you should treat their wounds. We won't change the previous rules after she wakes up.

"Yes."

After that, Toby thought of something and said, "Max read the record book the whole night, but she didn't finish reading. She even hurt her throat. Now, her throat is so hoarse that she can't make a sound. Does she still... need to read it?"

Viola was silent for a moment. Then she said, "Her throat is hoarse, but her hands are well. She should kneel and write. She can use both methods in turns."

"Yes, Ms. Zumthor."

After hanging up the phone, Viola's expression became serious again.

When Viola looked at Bobby outside the gate, her eyes became cold again.

Viola sneered, "I thought he came here for something else. It turns out that he knew that Max couldn't take it anymore and came to plead."

Ormand looked down and kept silent.

Viola called Jimmy in. "Tell Bobby that I will never see him. And I will never forgive him. Tell him to get lost! Don't bother me anymore!"

Viola almost roared out the last two sentences. The anger in her chest was burning. Viola was really angry.

Jimmy obediently went to tell Bobby.

At the gate, Jimmy repeated Viola's original words to Bobby. He said in earnest.

"Mr. McGraw, please leave. Ms. Zumthor will not see you. She is angry. You will only make her angrier even if you stay here for two more days."

Bobby raised his eyes and looked at the bedroom window on the third floor of the villa. He didn't blink his eyes. His gaze was firm.

"Mr. McGraw..."

Jimmy failed to persuade Bobby. He could only sigh and shake his head, leaving Bobby standing alone.

Not long after Jimmy left, Todd and Leia leisurely came over to visit. They saw Bobby standing alone at the gate.

Bobby focused his gaze on the window of the bedroom on the third floor. He did not pay any attention to Todd and Leia who were walking over.

Leia had already learned about the McGraw family's matter from Todd. She had no expression on her face when she saw Bobby.

"As Viola's big brother, you actually helped an illegitimate daughter and lied about Viola's background. You are the one who hurt her the most. If I were Viola, I would not forgive you either!"

Leia did not hide the displeasure on her face and snorted.

Todd did not stop Leia from complaining to Bobby. But after she finished speaking, Todd looked at Bobby seriously.

"Mr. McGraw, do you want to know how to make Viola forgive you?"