

Ex husband Goes Money Comes Chapter 427

Viola's smiling expression instantly stiffened.

They stared into each other's eyes. Bobby waited nervously, his Adam's apple bobbing in his throat.

Viola stared at him for a while before finally speaking, "I accept your apology. As for forgiveness... I came back to the McGraw family today to see Dad again. I don't want to talk about anything else."

Bobby's eyes turned dark.

His sister was brought up by him, and he knew that it was a sign of refusal.

"Alright, I'm willing to wait until the day you can completely forgive me," he said with a smile.

Viola stared at him and said nothing.

Viola was about to turn around and leave the hall to see her father when Lainey suddenly ran down from upstairs.

"Honey! Dad... Dad's monitor shows a flatline!" Lainey shouted.

Her words dealt a heavy blow to the whole of Adain Mountain.

Viola's eyes turned red and she ran upstairs. Bobby stood up with his hands on his knees and followed.

Russell, who was in the hall, also heard Lainey's shout and quickly ran upstairs.

“Dad!”

As a few of them shouted in unison, the heartbeat of the old man on the bed stopped and his eyes were serene.

Sitting next to Willard, Bentley, who always looked aloof, was sobbing in pain with red eyes.

The ward was full of sadness. Viola held the door frame, her tears falling uncontrollably. Her heart ached heavily.

Her sad eyes were suddenly filled with rage. She took out her phone and called Tyler.

“Get all the members of the Dark Bell to find Max! I want to see her die!”

Willard’s funeral was handled by Bentley and Russell.

Viola couldn’t get involved in these things because she was pregnant. Ormand, who had rushed over, took her back home and comforted her.

The entire organization went out in full force to search for Max at the river bank, asking every farmer in the village from house to house.

For two whole days and two nights, there was no news about her, as if she had disappeared from the world.

Viola was furious, but for the sake of her baby, she suppressed her temper and called Russell to the villa.

“Russell, I can’t find Max, but her mistake caused Dad’s death. I must make her pay.”

Of course, Russell could relate.

“Viola, what do you want to do? I will fully support you.”

Viola looked up and thought of Max’s face. Her eyes were cold. “Announce her death in public, saying that during her vacation, as she suddenly heard of her father’s death, out of grief, she fell into the river and died from drowning.”

Russell was startled. “You want her to never return to the McGraw family even if she is alive? You don’t want her to live with the name Max McGraw?”

“Yes.”

“Alright, I got it. I will help you deal with it.”

Willard passed away, and Bobby was no longer in charge. Max had disappeared since then and had never reappeared.

The entire McGraw family, managed by Viola, was peaceful and quiet.

Peaceful days always passed very quickly.

Eight months later.

Viola had a baby bump and her pretty face's skin was still tender.

She sat on the sofa and watched a movie with a giant projector. Ormand was in the kitchen, helping her cut the fruit.

She was watching with intrigue when the baby moved a bit.

The movement was so painful that Viola's entire body spasmed and she almost fainted.

"Orin!"

She shouted with difficulty.

Ormand put down the unfinished fruit in his hand, ran out, squatted in front of her, and checked her condition.

"Are you going to give birth?"

Viola furrowed her brows in pain and shook her head, "One of the babies kicked me again."

Ormand felt so worried about her and then stared at her baby bump furiously with gnashed teeth.

“This restless child must be extremely naughty! It has made you suffer so much. When it grows older, I will spank its butt to take revenge for you!”

Viola burst out laughing.

“Don’t be so fierce. They are just two babies. They know nothing.”

Ormand stroked her belly and still felt mad. “But it has made you suffer so much. I must make him suffer too!”

Viola could not help but laugh at his serious accusation.

“The babies are listening. They will bear grudges. When they grow older, they will definitely help me, but not you. The three of us will bully you!”

Ormand didn’t care, as long as Viola was happy.

Just as Viola was about to speak, she suddenly felt a sharp pain in her belly. Her brows were tightly furrowed in pain.

“What’s wrong? Did the baby kick you again?”

Viola shook her head.

As the pain eased, she realized something. “Hubby, I’ll probably ... give birth!”

Ormand was terrified. He immediately sent a message to Todd, Leia, Bentley, Russell, and Sherlyn. Then he picked up

Viola and went straight to the hospital.

When Viola was sent to the delivery room, everyone rushed over on time and surrounded her to ask her about her condition.

Seeing this group of people, Viola was dumbfounded. She turned to look at Ormand, who was beside her. "Why did you call so many people here? To watch me give birth?"

Ormand's palms were sweaty, and his voice trembled slightly. He was even more nervous than her.

"I said that when you give birth, I would experience the pain of giving birth again. I am afraid that I can't stay with you in the ward, so I called everyone to talk to you."

"No, there are so many people. I'm nervous. I only need you to keep me company."

"But..." He also wanted to feel her pain.

Bentley stood forward to explain in time. Viola didn't have to experience the pain again. The doctor would come in at any time to check her cervical dilatation. When the time was right, Viola could get an epidural shot.

Ormand and Viola were confused.

Viola was pleasantly surprised. "It turns out that due to advanced medical technology, there is such a good thing. Bentley, why didn't you tell me earlier? I was nervous for a long time!"

Ormand, however, was stunned, "So, it turned out that you were fooling me by making me experience the labor pain simulator?"

Bentley didn't answer.

These people said many words of encouragement and left nervously.

Fifteen minutes later, Viola was pushed into the delivery room, and Ormand also went in there with her.

The babies' positions were normal and Viola could have an easy delivery.

After getting the painless injection, Viola felt much better. It was not as painful as the rumors said.

Ormand held her hand nervously, shivering all over, and even his lower jaw was tight.

Viola turned her head and stroked his handsome face with a smile. "Don't be afraid. It's pretty easy."

His grim face was covered in a thin layer of cold sweat. He complained in a low voice, "Easy for you to say. If only it were really so easy!"

Viola only smiled.

After six hours of suffering, Viola gave birth to the babies smoothly.

The nurse gently cleaned the two babies, wrapped them up, and called for Ormand.

“Congratulations, Mr. Hobson, you have a son and a daughter now. Come and take a look!”

Ormand didn't move at all, not caring at all. He focused on wiping away Viola's sweat, his eyes filled with affection.

Viola smiled weakly. “Aren't you going to take a look at the babies?”

Ormand put on a serious face and only wanted to guard her. “That's not important.”