“What happened?” Elaina had a strong sense of unease, and even her heart was beating faster uncontrollably.

“Something happened to the boy who came in the afternoon.”

Joyce looked anxious and continued to explain, “After you left the emergency room in the afternoon, his mother insisted on transferring him to another hospital. We had no choice but to agree.

“I thought it was just a slight concussion. It would not be a problem if he went to another hospital. Unexpectedly, I just received a call from the emergency care center, saying that a patient had a hemorrhage during surgery in a private hospital.

“After asking for the patient’s information, I realized that it was that boy. His mother took him to Muatwe Clinic for surgery!”
