Kemp Apartment. Saul sent Elaina to the foot of the apartment building.

“Thank you for today.” Elaina thanked him again.

“You have already thanked me several times. You don’t have to be so polite.” Saul pretended to be unhappy and said, “If you really want to thank me, treat me to a meal someday. You’ve promised me this.”

“Okay, I will.” Elaina nodded.

“Go in and rest early,” Saul said.

Elaina had only taken two steps when she heard Saul say, “I’ve ordered food for you.

Remember to eat later.”

“Okay, thank you.” Elaina nodded in surprise. At this time, it seemed that “thank you” was all she needed to say.

She walked into the building and disappeared from Saul’s sight.

The smile on Saul’s face disappeared. He leaned against the car and lit a cigarette.

Halfway through the cigarette, he saw a car not far away. It stopped in front of him a moment later.

Saul smiled. He threw the unfinished cigarette on the ground and stubbed it out with his
