The First Heir – Chapter 1560

The point of view shifted back to Philip's side. When he returned to the hotel, Wynn was already anxiously pacing back and forth in the living room.

Seeing that Philip had returned, she stepped forward anxiously and asked with worry, "How did things go? Have they been settled? What did Lynn say? What did Uncle Martin and Uncle Bernard say?"

Philip helped Wynn sit down and comforted her, saying, "Don't worry, I'll take care of this matter. You should stay here and take good care of yourself and the baby. I'll make a trip back to Riverdale tonight. I think there'll be some troublesome matters to deal with."

Philip could already guess that the brothers, Martin and Bernard, had already laid down a trap in Riverdale. They were probably waiting for him. However, he was not afraid.

"You want to go back to Riverdale? Alone? It's too risky! Uncle Martin and Uncle Bernard won't let you off! They even dare to make a move against me, their niece. They'll have no qualms hurting you, my husband who married into my family. No way, I won't allow you to go back. At most, I'll just give up the shares and sign the document I've saved some money. It's enough for us to buy a new house in Uppercreek."

Wynn was anxious. She was worried that Philip would be captured by Martin and Bernard the moment he returned.

Philip smiled, stroked Wynn's delicate face, and said, "Everything will be fine, silly. I know what I'm doing. I promise you. If there's any danger, I'll immediately retreat, okay?"

Philip knew that Wynn was concerned about him.

Wynn's eyes were teary. She was so aggrieved that she was about to cry. She said, "Let's make a pinky promise, then."

As she said that, she stretched out her small jade-like hand.

Philip smiled and hooked pinkies with her.

It was also at this time that Charles pushed Martha in. Seeing this scene, Martha cursed angrily, "Philip, you're finally back. When are you sending us back to Riverdale? I don't want to stay here anymore. I want to return to the villa!"

When Martha was kidnapped the last time, it had left a shadow in her heart. She had been making a fuss about going back since last night.

Philip looked at Martha and said, "Soon. Wait two more days."

"Another two days? Philip, are you doing this on purpose?" Martha got angry and scolded him.

Charles quickly pushed her away, which only made her curse again, "Charles, don't push me away. This is nonsense..."

Philip put his hands on Wynn's delicate shoulders and said, "Wynn, after this matter is solved, I'll bring you to a place."

Hearing this, Wynn was full of doubts and asked, "A place? Where? I'm not in the mood for a holiday right now."

Wynn simply assumed that Philip wanted to take her on a trip.

Philip smiled, reached out, and bopped Wynn on the nose. He said, "Haven't you always wanted to know who I am? Haven't you always wanted to know where my home is?"

Wynn shuddered as her heartbeat sped up.

Was he finally going to tell her?
