The First Heir – Chapter 1604

Wynn, Anne, and Lydia arrived at the largest shopping mall nearby.

Lydia appeared to be very energetic. She went to all the baby specialty stores and bought a lot. She seemed to be enjoying this shopping spree.

Wynn teased, "Lydia, those who don't know might think it's you who's having a baby."

Lydia turned her head, stomped her foot, and said, "Sister Wynn, you only know how to laugh at me."

Wynn laughed while holding her waist. The two walked into a spice store.

Outside the door, Victor Bell had arranged four bodyguards to accompany them.

After entering the store, Wynn began to carefully select the spices. She was now quite interested in these. Suddenly, a beautiful woman dressed cleanly and neatly approached Wynn, saying softly, "Miss Johnston, hello..."

Wynn was taken aback. She turned to look at the delicate woman who was selecting spices. She was around 1.7 meters tall with a ponytail and a black trench coat. Wynn asked suspiciously, "Do you know me?"

The woman, with a delicate face and a smile full of charm, said, "Miss Johnston, my name is Cleo Lovelace."

Wynn frowned as she shook her head and said, "I don't know you."

Cleo smiled and said, "You will soon. I look forward to our next meeting."

After saying that, the woman put on her wide sunglasses, turned around, and left the spice store. Wynn turned around, looked at the gallant back of the departing woman, and felt dubious.

That person was so strange. Did she come over just to say her name?

"Sister Wynn, what's wrong? What are you looking at?" Lydia turned around at this time, grinning as she followed Wynn's line of sight.

Wynn shook her head and said, "Nothing. Let's go."

After a short stroll, Wynn and the others went back. After Cleo Lovelace left the mall, she went straight into a black Cadillac that was parked in front of the mall. Four people sat in the car. The driver and front passenger seats were each occupied by a man in a black suit and sunglasses.

In the backseat, next to Cleo was a handsome young man in a well-cut navy blue plaid suit. He asked flamboyantly, "Is it confirmed?"

Cleo nodded and said, "Yes, it's her."

The young man sat up straight and looked through the car window at Wynn and the others who happened to be leaving the mall. He said, "Cousin, I've searched so hard for you."

As he said that, a cold smile appeared at the corner of the young man's mouth.

Cleo raised her pretty brows, tilted her head sideways, and asked, "Shane Lovelace, what do you plan to do?"
