The First Heir – Chapter 1667

Everyone raised their eyebrows and saw a few people barging in at the door of the private room. Philip was naturally in the lead with his hands in his trouser pockets. His expression was indifferent as he stared at Liam coldly.

Liam was instantly furious. He slammed the table, got up, and shouted, "Philip Clarke, why are you here?! Who allowed you to barge in? Get out! Can't you see that we're hosting an important guest?"

Liam was full of anger, especially when he saw Philip swaggering in with a bunch of people. He felt extremely upset!

What was this guy going to do?

Was this a place he could barge in at will?

Bernard was also startled. He raised his eyebrows and said to Philip, "Philip, don't you think you've gone too far? We did nothing to offend you today. By barging in like this, do you still have any respect for me?"

Bernard shouted with coldness in his eyes!

Philip had repeatedly foiled his plans and even beaten up his second brother like that. Bernard was still frustrated and had nowhere to vent his anger!

However, he was also afraid of Philip.

After all, Master Eight's words still lingered in his mind. Before he was certain of Philip's influence in Uppercreek, he dared not act rashly.

As for the test, they all stood up at this moment and pointed at Philip while chiding, "Philip, this is Uppercreek, not Riverdale. Don't be too reckless!"

"That's right, today is the banquet we're specially holding for the director of the Uppercreek Chamber of Commerce. You don't have the right to be here. Get out!"

"Deputy Chairman Johnston, this Philip Clarke is too insolent. We need to find someone to teach him a lesson!"

Several people roared angrily, showing no tolerance for Philip.

Russell Carl and Jacky Cullen were among them. A layer of frost hung on their faces as though they could not wait to swallow Philip alive.

The humiliation they had suffered because of him in the hotel that day was still fresh in their minds. Fortunately, someone had rescued them on that day. Otherwise, they might have died.

However, Philip chuckled. He turned his head, glared at those people talking with cold eyes, and said gravely, "I remember all of you. By right, none of you should be appearing in front of me right now."

His words made those people tremble and felt creeped out. After all, Philip's eyes were too frightening!

"Hehe, Philip, don't think that after doing such a thing to us we'd be afraid of you!"

One of them sneered coldly.

Philip smiled, the corner of his mouth curling up as he took a step forward. Suddenly, he kicked the man's abdomen fiercely!

That man flew back like a cannonball and crashed heavily into the wine rack on the side!

Bang, boom!

The wine rack collapsed and bottles shattered all over the floor.

The man struggled to raise his head, pointed at Philip tremblingly, and said while spitting out blood, "You, you..."

Then, he passed out.

This scene scared everyone in the private room!

How dare Philip commit a crime in public?!

Bernard was furious. He slammed the table, got up, and roared, "Philip, how dare you display such audacity! I couldn't touch you in Riverdale but this is Uppercreek now. Don't be too arrogant!"

Bernard was enraged at this moment. Philip actually dared to make a move on his people in front of him! Moreover, it had been a lethal move!

"Philip, you're presumptuous! You're disrespecting Uncle Bernard! "

Liam also yelled angrily while pointing at Philip, wishing he could go over and give him a violent beating. However, he knew that he was not a match for Philip.

Philip's kick earlier had sent goosebumps all over Liam's body.

How could this guy be so skillful?
