

The First Heir –

Chapter 1731

Fennel suddenly grinned and said, “Reed Williams? He’s also one of the Seven Kings of Disciples, my predecessor. If I remember correctly, he used to be the king of disciples in the sixth zone and used to be under your mother’s command.”

What?

At that moment, Philip was flabbergasted!

Reed Williams was one of the Seven Kings of Disciples! Moreover, he was also the king of disciples of the sixth zone where his mother controlled!

He used to be his mother’s follower!

Philip restrained the shock in his heart and asked, “What about his combat power?”

This was a question that Philip had always wondered about because back in the Dragon Warriors, he had been deeply staggered by Reed’s strength!

“Combat power? I’m not sure. I’ve never fought him before. However, according to the ranking of the Seven Kings of the Disciples by the Nonagon, he’s the second most powerful among the previous batch of Seven Kings of the Disciples,” Fennel said with a strong desire for battle in his eyes.

“Second?” Philip frowned and asked, “Who’s the first?”

Fennel turned his head, looked at Philip in confusion, and asked, “You really don’t know anything at all?”

Philip shook his head.

Fennel mumbled helplessly, “Your old man is hiding so much from you? That can’t be. Does that old guy have other plans?”

After muttering, Fennel said, “Among the Seven Kings of Disciples back then, the one with the strongest fighting power and the most amazing talent who’s also known as the supreme king of the seven kings is the battle god by your father’s side now, Fulton Hash. He was once the king of the seventh zone and has always served your father. When your father was accused of being a defector by the Nonagon, Fulton followed your father and stained the entire path with blood. That was how they managed to break out of the Nonagon. His combat power is the strongest among all known kings of disciples today and no one has been able to match up to him! I’m afraid I won’t last more than ten moves against him.”

Not more than ten moves?

Philip was shocked. He did not expect Fulton to have such a background and identity!

Was he the supreme king of the Seven Kings of Disciples back then?

With such a character serving him, why did his father still leave the Nonagon back then?

Could all of it be part of his father’s plans?

Philip pondered for a moment. The bottle of wine in front of him was already empty.

After digesting the amount of information Fennel just told him, Philip felt that he had been caught in a huge conspiracy.

He knew too little about this world.

“What exactly is the world behind the door like? I want to know,” Philip asked.

Fennel crossed his arms, looked at Philip, and said, “I don’t mind telling you since you’re going to enter the Nonagon anyway. It’ll do you no harm to find out earlier. However, I have to remind you that after learning this information, you can’t reveal the secret about the door to anyone around you because that will bring them endless trouble, even death. At that time, even though the Clarke family is the world’s largest family, you won’t be able to withstand the reprisal from the door because everything there can’t be judged with the same eyes as ordinary people. Besides, the Clarke family only relies on the economy now, as well as some connections. It won’t do you any good to get into trouble with the countries or those guys from the door.”

Philip nodded and said, “I understand.”

Following that, Fennel said, “The world behind the door is made up of a few lost civilizations. Inside, there are civilizations that the world has never discovered. They’re more advanced than the current human civilization. I don’t know if you understand the classifications of the civilization systems. Let’s put it this way. The highest civilization in the world as we know it is the first-class civilization, and we’re now below the first-class civilization. When we break through the first-class civilization, it means that we can fully utilize any resources in this world. And the lost civilization behind the door, according to the results of their research, is the knowledge system and energy material that only a second-class civilization can have. Do you know what this means? Why is the technology of Country M so advanced and their warfare system surpasses us by decades that we can’t even replicate the warplanes of the 80s?”

Philip frowned. He knew about this matter.
