

The First Heir – Chapter 1803

“Okay, we’ll leave this to you,” Milo said before he hung up the phone respectfully.

At the same time, he breathed a sigh of relief. With a triumphant smile, he said to Homer, “Homer, it’s settled. With Uncle Winston taking action, this matter will come to an end at last.”

Homer also let out a breath of relief and fell heavily on the sofa, covered in a cold sweat.

It was finally resolved.

With Uncle Winston around, no matter how capable Philip was, he should not think of making any waves in Hampton.

On the side, Hector also burst out in laughter and said, “Dad, I already told you that everything will be fine. With Fifth Grandpa around, who can do anything to the Dunley family of Flower City?”

As he said that, he sat on the sofa swaggeringly, crossed his legs, and picked up an apple to munch on.

Homer glared at him fiercely and shouted angrily, “From today onward, you’ll be grounded at home for three months! After this matter is resolved, I’ll send you out of the country!”

With a gloomy face, Hector looked at Milo and said, “Uncle Milo, I don’t want to go abroad. I...”

Milo also glared at him and said, “No way, you have to listen to your dad this time. You’ve caused us a lot of trouble. It’s time to send you abroad to gain some experience.”

On the other side, Winston was still sitting by the pond. After he ended the call, he pulled up the fishing rod abruptly and caught a big fish. The attendant next to him hurried forward to take the fish.

Winston got up, put his hands behind his back, and said with a smile, "Let's go back. I want to meet this kid from out of town to see if he really has some tricks up his sleeve."

Soon, Winston's car returned to the Dunley Group building.

Meanwhile, Philip's helicopter had already landed at a landing pad near Dunley Group. He stepped down from the helicopter with an upright posture, his clothes billowing from the helicopter's propellers. The subordinate behind him handed him a phone and said, "Young Master Clarke, a call from Mr. Thomas."

Philip took it and asked, "What's the matter?"

On the other end of the phone, George Thomas replied respectfully, "Young Master, are you in Hampton?"

Philip hummed and replied, "I just arrived. What's up?"

George quickly said, "Young Master, the situation in the Dunley family of Hampton is very complicated. You must be careful in everything you do. We've just confirmed the news that Milo Dunley has contacted Winston Dunley of Hampton. I believe their conversation was about you. This person has some strength and means. I suggest you lie low and wait until the person I sent arrives before you act."

George had received a report from his subordinates ten minutes ago. The young master actually brought a few of his men to go looking for the Dunley family in Hampton.

The Dunley family in Hampton was not comparable to the Dunley family in Flower City. It was the home base of the main Dunley family. It was dangerous for the young master to rush over like this!

However, Philip merely smiled and said, "It's just a little Dunley family, I'm not worried about them. I don't have much time and want to make it quick. Since they dared to contact the members of the main Dunley family, they should be prepared to be destroyed. Okay, that's enough. I'm heading to Dunley Group right now."

After saying that, Philip tossed the phone to the subordinate behind him and ordered, "I want you to personally contact Moses Dunley of the Dunley family and tell him that I'm here uninvited."

The subordinate nodded in response and quickly left.

Philip looked at the Dunley Group building not far away which stood tall in the city. The corner of his mouth curled up as he said, "Hampton of Charbury. I didn't think that I'd be here in such a fashion."

After that, Philip got into a black Cadillac SUV that was prepared for him.