

Forgive My Ex-husband Chapter 340

The atmosphere in the interrogation room froze. Several men in black looked at each other, and their eyes began to struggle and hesitate.

The subtle expressions on the faces of the policemen could be quickly perceived, and they were speechless with anger and guilt.

He was angry that he had been cheated by these people and felt guilty that he had kept Jonas in prison these days.

The captain glanced at them and threw the documents in his hands on the table again. His face was not angry but frightening.

The men in black trembled at the sight of this.

"I don't have so much time for you to do the secret signal. If you don't want to say anything, we can just take you away," the captain said, losing his patience with them.

"You'd better stop struggling here. You can still save your lives if you tell us who is behind the scene earlier," one of the policemen said.

The other one disagreed, "It's not a big deal. They are good friends, and it's good to be in jail together."

They didn't know what they were talking about. The men in black got more and more flustered. It was completely different from what they had imagined at the beginning.

In the beginning, the deal between them and Jerry was to make Jonas take the blame. As long as they convicted Jonas, Jerry would send someone to bail them out, and then everything would be fine.

But why did it turn out that everyone was going to jail?

One of them was a timid man. He confessed directly when several people were gossiping. "It's Jerry. He asked us to do all of this."

When one of them said it, the others immediately lost their psychological pressure. They told the whole story word by word, and the policeman in charge of recording kept typing.

"If you don't believe me, you can investigate the person who called you. It's none other than Jerry," someone said loudly, as if worrying that the other party would not believe it.

Under the instruction of the captain, a policeman began to investigate the mysterious person who reported the case that day. This number was from a shop on the street, which was more suspicious.

The investigation team started to investigate the person who made the phone call that day.

After a variety of investigations, they finally found the figure of Jerry in the surveillance video near the shop. The case of more than a week had come to an end.

The answer came out in an instant. In order to frame Jonas, Jerry had set up this trap.
