

Feel the Way You Feel, My Love Chapter 1356

Natalie scoffed.

“Alright then.I’ll text you later in the afternoon.”

“Okay.” Joyce nodded.

Only then did Natalie let her off.

Joyce waved goodbye and headed out the door.

Just as the door closed shut behind her, Joyce leaned against the door and retched all of a sudden.

Color had drained from her face at this point.

What is happening to me? She was experiencing dizziness, upset stomach, and dry heaving from time to time these days.

Gosh, I must really be sick.

However, she never bothered to go to the doctor since she didn’t have much time left to live.

It’s just pointless.

Joyce took a deep breath and made her way toward the presidential suite despite feeling sick.She knocked on the door and entered Justin’s suite.

On the other hand, Natalie walked out of her room toward the elevator at eleven that morning to catch her flight back to J City.

Her footsteps slowed as she passed by the presidential suite.I wonder if Joyce is still in there.

She stared at the door and wondered.She then picked up the pace once again and entered the elevator.

Ding! The doors of the elevator slid open.

Natalie walked out with four bodyguards following behind while carrying her luggage.

Very soon, Natalie arrived at the airport. She pulled out her phone and dialed Shane's number.

"Are you coming home?" Shane answered the call in no time.

He heard the sounds of car engine from her end.

"Yes." Natalie nodded.

"I'm on my way to the airport. So I'm calling to tell you that I will reach J City airport around 4 p.m. today."

Baycoast wasn't too far away from J City. It would only take two to three hours of flight time.

Shane lifted his chin and hummed in response.

"Got it. I will wait for you at J City airport at four in the evening."

"Okay." Natalie smiled.

"Oh right. Weren't you planning to ask Joyce what happened? Did you get your question answered?" Shane suddenly asked.

"No."

Natalie sighed at that.

"Joyce has been very adamant about it. She wouldn't tell me no matter what. She even said I would stop her if I knew. So I have no choice but to give it up. I can't force her, can I?"

"Alright. Let her be then"

Shane replied softly.

Natalie nodded.

"Yeah. That's what I thought. That's why I decided to come back today. Or else I would have stayed a while longer to see if I can help her out."

"You don't need to stay in Baycoast to help," Shane said in a dull tone.

Natalie could tell that he wasn't very happy that she would extend her stay in Baycoast for Joyce's sake. She couldn't help but laugh.

"I'm just saying. Joyce didn't tell me anything anyway, so she probably doesn't need my help."

"It's good that she doesn't need your help. She should take care of her own problems."

Shane uttered.

Natalie was nonplussed.

"Okay, okay. Someone's getting jealous again. Alright, Darling, I'm hanging up now. I'm almost at the airport. We can talk again when I get back."

"Sure."

Shane nodded.

Natalie put her phone away after he hung up. She got off the shuttle and entered the airport under the escort of four bodyguards.

Natalie hung around the airport for an hour or so before she boarded the plane through the VIP passage. She turned heads as she passed by the economy class.

After all, it wasn't every day that you see a passenger board the plane with four bodyguards.

Moreover, Natalie looked even hotter with her sunglasses on.

"Did you see that? Did you? Bodyguards. All four of them. I've never seen such a grand entrance before. She must be some wealthy socialite."

"You might be wrong. I can tell that she's very good looking even with those sunglasses on. She might even be a celebrity."

"You're right."

"Heh. You're all wrong. She's neither a wealthy socialite nor a celebrity."

A female voice sounded out of the blue.

Everyone directed their attention to the woman.

"Hey, what are you talking about? What do you mean she's neither a wealthy socialite nor a celebrity? Do you know her?" somebody asked the woman.

The woman looked up. She wasn't very pretty but she looked pleasing to the eye.

At that moment, the woman's face was clouded over with jealousy.

"I know her. She's my course mate and came from an ordinary family. The only reason she's able to dress like a socialite and have so many bodyguards escorting her is because of her rich, married boyfriend. Everyone knows about this back in my university."

The woman lowered her eyes to hide the guilt in it.

Nobody caught her lying as she was quick to hide her guilt.

However, her statement caused a huge commotion on the plane.

"My gosh. She's having a rich, married man as her lover? She's a homewrecker? Dang. And I thought she was pretty and really classy just now. How shameless of her"

"Yeah. What is wrong with the world? Why can't girls be self-sufficient? Why do they choose to become a homewrecker? Sigh..."

Lucy's lips curved into a smirk as she listened in on their derogatory comments and her eyes flashed with delight.

Natalie would have been shocked to see what Lucy had turned into if she was around.

Back then, Lucy was very good at hiding her true colors even though she was a sly and materialistic woman.

Moreover, she had the innocent-girl-next-door look which didn't help matters.

However, Lucy's style had completely changed since then. She looked as if she had been through a lot in order to warrant the change.

The old Lucy was dressed very plainly but the Lucy now was dressed like a fashionista.

Moreover, the heavy makeup she had put on didn't go well with her girl-next-door vibe. She even wore dark-colored makeup on and around her eyes, something the old Lucy would never do.

In a nutshell, she had changed completely into a new person.

Lucy accompanied a wealthy heir to Baycoast to attend a dinner party and was returning home to J City after being abandoned by her partner. She had never expected to run into Shane's wife.

That was a woman she hated to the core.

That's right.

I hate her! By right, there shouldn't be any bad blood between her and Natalie since they had never crossed paths.

However, she hated Natalie to the core because she was Shane's wife.

She had always thought that she would end up with Shane if not for Natalie. She was sure Shane would fall for her if he never met Natalie or if Natalie looked a little uglier.

After all, she was the one who had rescued him. She had been under the impression that Shane never fell for her because she wasn't as pretty as Natalie.

Only God knew how many times she had wanted to ruin Natalie's face.

Shane might turn his eyes away from Natalie and look at me instead if Natalie loses her beauty.

However, she couldn't even go near Natalie nor meet her, let alone ruin her pretty face.

Lucy couldn't go near Natalie even if they had met a while ago and were riding on the same plane.

It was all thanks to Natalie's four bodyguards.

Nevertheless, Lucy was still capable of ruining her reputation and labeling her as a homewrecker even though she couldn't physically hurt her.

Lucy smiled in delight upon that thought.

On the other hand, Natalie had no idea what was going on in the first-class cabin.

She closed the fashion magazine and removed her sunglasses.
