

Feel the Way You Feel, My Love Chapter 1357

“You’re right.”

“Heh.You’re all wrong.She’s neither a wealthy socialite nor a celebrity.”

A female voice sounded out of the blue.

Everyone directed their attention to the woman.

“Hey, what are you talking about? What do you mean she’s neither a wealthy socialite nor a celebrity? Do you know her?” somebody asked the woman.

The woman looked up.She wasn’t very pretty but she looked pleasing to the eye.

At that moment, the woman’s face was clouded over with jealousy.

“I know her.She’s my course mate and came from an ordinary family.The only reason she’s able to dress like a socialite and have so many bodyguards escorting her is because of her rich, married boyfriend.Everyone knows about this back in my university.”

The woman lowered her eyes to hide the guilt in it.

Nobody caught her lying as she was quick to hide her guilt.

However, her statement caused a huge commotion on the plane.

“My gosh.She’s having a rich, married man as her lover? She’s a homewrecker? Dang.And I thought she was pretty and really classy just now.How shameless of her”

“Yeah.What is wrong with the world? Why can’t girls be self-sufficient? Why do they choose to become a homewrecker? Sigh...”

Lucy’s lips curved into a smirk as she listened in on their derogatory comments and her eyes flashed with delight.

Natalie would have been shocked to see what Lucy had turned into if she was around.

Back then, Lucy was very good at hiding her true colors even though she was a sly and materialistic woman.

Moreover, she had the innocent-girl-next- door look which didn’t help matters.

However, Lucy's style had completely changed since then. She looked as if she had been through a lot in order to warrant the change.

The old Lucy was dressed very plainly but the Lucy now was dressed like a fashionista.

Moreover, the heavy makeup she had put on didn't go well with her girl-next-door vibe. She even wore dark colored makeup on and around her eyes, something the old Lucy would never do.

In a nutshell, she had changed completely into a new person.

Lucy accompanied a wealthy heir to Baycoast to attend a dinner party and was returning home to J City after being abandoned by her partner. She had never expected to run into Shane's wife.

That was a woman she hated to the core.

That's right.

I hate her! By right, there shouldn't be any bad blood between her and Natalie since they had never crossed paths.

However, she hated Natalie to the core because she was Shane's wife.

She had always thought that she would end up with Shane if not for Natalie. She was sure Shane would fall for her if he never met Natalie or if Natalie looked a little uglier.

After all, she was the one who had rescued him. She had been under the impression that Shane never fell for her because she wasn't as pretty as Natalie.

Only God knew how many times she had wanted to ruin Natalie's face.

Shane might turn his eyes away from Natalie and look at me instead if Natalie loses her beauty.

However, she couldn't even go near Natalie nor meet her, let alone ruin her pretty face.

Lucy couldn't go near Natalie even if they had met a while ago and were riding on the same plane.

It was all thanks to Natalie's four bodyguards.

Nevertheless, Lucy was still capable of ruining her reputation and labeling her as a homewrecker even though she couldn't physically hurt her.

Lucy smiled in delight upon that thought.

On the other hand, Natalie had no idea what was going on in the first-class cabin. She closed the fashion magazine and removed her sunglasses.

The bodyguard who was sitting right opposite quickly leaned over and asked, "Madam, do you need anything?"

"I'm feeling a little thirsty." Natalie placed the magazine down and replied.

The bodyguard nodded.

"Got it. I'll get the flight attendant over right now. Please bear with me, Madam." Natalie hummed in response.

The bodyguard then took off his seatbelt, stood up, and pressed the bell.

Very soon, a flight attendant attended to them with a smile on her face. She turned to the bodyguard and asked, "How can I help you, Sir?"

"Please fetch us a cup of water. Madam's feeling thirsty," the bodyguard replied.

In the next instant, he paused as if something had just occurred to him.

"Madam, what do you want to drink?"

The flight attendant turned to face Natalie as well. She was momentarily stunned by Natalie's beauty.

However, it was quickly replaced by a look of distaste. She must be the woman people were talking about over in economy class just now.

A homewrecker parading around with four bodyguards in tow. I must admit, she's really beautiful. But what a pity she has no morals.

How could she be so shameless? She could have any man she wants with that beauty.

Why did she have to be a homewrecker? Natalie was still pondering over what to drink when she suddenly felt the disdainful look the flight attendant was giving her.

Hence, she looked up to see what was going on. The flight attendant was caught off guard as Natalie suddenly looked up.

She didn't have enough time to hide her disdain for Natalie.

Natalie pursed her lips and said coldly, "Excuse me, Miss. Did I offend you?"

The flight attendant was stunned.

However, she quickly shot her a baffled smile and replied, "No. Why do you ask?"

Natalie crossed her legs.

"Why? Why are you looking at me with disdain if I've never offended you? You're staring at me as if I'm a piece of trash"

"I..."

The flight attendant froze, feeling embarrassed. She never expected to be caught red-handed.

Moreover, Natalie had called her out in public.

Hence, she was stricken with terror because Natalie had the rights to file a complaint against her. Her four bodyguards jumped to their feet upon her words and gave the flight attendant an icy stare.

"Why did you stare at Madam with disdain just now? You'd better talk, or else I'll take you to your airline company right now since we have yet to take off and talk to your boss about this" one of the bodyguards spoke in a low voice.

It was the one who had pressed the bell just now.

The flight attendant was well aware that the four others were staring at her frostily from behind.

Color had drained from her face at this point and she was shaking with fear. She was especially nervous when the bodyguard said he would take her to her boss.

Her eyes reddened and she quickly bowed to Natalie in apology.

"I'm sorry. I'm so sorry. I didn't want to do this. It's just that earlier, someone in economy class mentioned that you're a homewrecker just now. T- That's why I... Sorry. I'm so sorry..."

The flight attendant bowed a few more times as she sobbed uncontrollably.

Natalie frowned upon her words.

“What did you say? Someone out there is calling me a homewrecker?”

“Yes.” The flight attendant nodded.

“What a b*tch.”

A hot-tempered bodyguard flew into a rage.

“She is Mr. Shane’s wife. This is their first marriage and are each other’s first love. Homewrecker? What nonsense!”

“That’s right. How dare she spread false rumors? She must have a death wish.”

At the moment, the other three bodyguards were rubbing their palms together, furious.

On the other hand, the flight attendant was dumbfounded.

What? Rumors? This beautiful woman standing in front of me is the real deal? That’s right.

How is it possible that such a beautiful woman would be a homewrecker? Rumors of her being a homewrecker must have been created by a jealous passenger on board.

How could I take her word for it and even show my disdain toward this lady? What was I thinking?

Feel the Way You Feel, My Love Chapter 1359

I’m just asking for trouble.

At that moment, the flight attendant deeply regretted her actions. I shouldn’t have believed the rumors. I should have been more aware of my attitude toward my passengers.

The flight attendant wished she could turn back time to right her wrongs.

“I don’t know who spread the rumors, but I do know that it came from the economy cabin.”

The flight attendant lowered her head and replied sheepishly.

Natalie narrowed her eyes.

“The economy cabin...”

“Madam, do you want me to go check out the person behind this?”

The bodyguard who had pressed the bell stepped forward and offered.

Another one of her bodyguards nodded.

“Me too, Madam. We’ll have a better chance of finding the culprit if we go together. After all, two heads are better than one”

“Go on, then” Natalie waved her hand.

The two bodyguards grunted in response and made their way toward the economy cabin.

The rest of the bodyguards stayed behind at the first- class cabin since someone had to stick around to protect Natalie.

“Um...”

The flight attendant raised her head and stared at Natalie warily.

“Excuse m-me...Madam, can you please let me off just this once? Can you please not take me to the management? I’ll be fired if you do. Please, I beg you.”

She knew that Natalie was a powerful socialite since she had booked the entire first-class cabin and brought four bodyguards along with her on her trip. Her airline company would be on Natalie’s side if her boss ever got involved.

After all, the airline company couldn’t afford to offend such a promising customer.

Hence, the flight attendant could only place her hope on Natalie. I’ll be able to get out of this unscathed as long as this lady here lets me off.

Natalie stared at her coldly.

“You want me to let you off?”

“Yes, Madam.”

The flight attendant bowed even lower.

Natalie twitched her lips.

“I can let you off. But before this, I want to know, is this how you treat your fellow passengers? Do you view them with disdain and judge them according to what you’ve heard?”

“No.”

The flight attendant quickly waved her hand.

“I hate homewreckers. That’s why I couldn’t help but stare at you with disdain. I don’t usually do that to my passengers. Madam, you can check my assessment if you don’t believe me. I have a thing against homewreckers because my sister was hurt by one. I’m so so sorry, Madam. I know I’m at fault. I’m really sorry.”

The flight attendant burst into tears as she spoke.

Natalie rubbed her temples.

“Why are you crying? I didn’t even bully you.”

“I-I can’t help it. I’m just too scared of losing this job,” the flight attendant replied in a small voice.

Natalie sighed.

“Forget it. I’ll let you off this time since you fell prey to rumors. I hope you don’t repeat the same mistake in the future. Or else you might just offend someone else and lose your job.”

The flight attendant looked up excitedly at her words. She shed tears of joy and nodded.

“I know, Madam. I will remember this forever. I won’t do it again”

“Okay, go back to work then.” Natalie waved her away.

The flight attendant wiped away her tears and broke into a smile. She then bowed politely to Natalie, thanked her, and left.

One of the bodyguards returned from the economy cabin the moment she left.

“Madam, I’ve found the culprit.” His face darkened as he spoke.

“Oh?”

Natalie pursed her lips as a look of disgust flashed in her eyes.

“Who is it?”

She hated people who spread rumors.

Rumors could kill.

There had been many instances whereby people had killed themselves due to rumors.

One would also be tempted to feel, think and act toward others in a different way than he or she otherwise would because of rumors.

One should never underestimate the power of words.

People who spread rumors were selfish and inconsiderate. They never took into account what kind of life their victims had to lead when they started these rumors.

Hence, Natalie wasn't going to let the culprit off this time around.

"You know her, Madam," her bodyguard reported.

Natalie was surprised.

"I do?"

Heh. What's more, an acquaintance.

"Who is it?" Natalie asked coldly.

"It's Lucy."

"Lucy?"

Natalie blinked in surprise. Her bodyguard nodded.

"Yes. She's on the plane as well. She saw us when we boarded the plane just now. That's why she's spreading rumors to ruin your reputation. After all, she has a crush on Mr. Shane."

The bodyguard gave her a cautious look when he mentioned Lucy's feelings for Shane. He was worried about upsetting Natalie.

However, Natalie found it rather funny.

"So, it's her. And I was wondering who it was. Okay then, I'm not surprised since it's her." Natalie scoffed.

The bodyguard stared at her.

“Sigmund is still keeping an eye on Lucy in the economy cabin. Madam, what do you want to do with her?”

“We can’t do anything about it since we’re already up in the air right now. It’ll be dangerous for everyone on board if she goes crazy, so we’ll just have to wait till we land before we can do anything. Get Sigmund to Enter title...

return to his seat. But before that, instruct the flight attendants to keep an eye on Lucy. Keep her on board when the plane lands. Do not let her get away”

Natalie narrowed her eyes and said. She wasn’t going to let Lucy off so easily this time around.

After all, who knows what else that woman would do to her if she lets her off today.

“Yes, Madam.”

Her bodyguard nodded and headed back to the economy cabin.

Very soon, he returned with Sigmund in tow.

“Madam, the flight attendants have agreed to help keep an eye on Lucy for us,” Sigmund reported.

“Great.” Natalie nodded.

She then pointed at the seat opposite her.

“Take a seat. You shouldn’t move around so much on the plane”

“Okay.”

The both of them replied and promptly returned to their seats.

Natalie didn’t say anything anymore. She put on her eye mask, closed her eyes and took a nap.

Two hours later, Natalie landed in J City airport.

One of her bodyguards woke her up from her slumber.

“Madam, we have arrived.”

Natalie removed her sleep mask and opened her eyes. It took some time for her eyes to adjust to the light before her vision cleared. She stared at the two bodyguards standing before her and rubbed her temples.

“We’ve arrived?”

“Yes, Madam.” Her bodyguard nodded.

“Madam, let’s get off the plane first. Sigmund has brought Lucy over to the airport lounge with the help of a flight attendant,” the other bodyguard added.

Natalie stretched lazily.

“Okay.”

With that, she kept her sleep mask in her bag, stood up, and alighted the plane with her two bodyguards.

Natalie pulled out her phone and dialed Shane’s number as she made her way toward the lounge.

Shane was going through some documents in his office when his phone rang. He broke into a smile when he saw the caller ID.

“Honey.” His public display of affection toward Natalie sent shivers down his secretary’s spine.

Natalie grunted in response.

“Darling, I’ve arrived.”

“You have?”

Shane was stunned. He quickly checked the time on the bottom right of his computer screen and noticed that it was already four in the afternoon.

“Sorry. I’ve been busy with work and have forgotten all about the time. I’ll be right over to pick you up.”

Shane stood up as he spoke.

Natalie smiled.

“You don’t have to come if you’re busy. I can come back home myself. I have four bodyguards with me anyways so you don’t have to worry about my safety.”

“I know. But I want to go. It’s been two days since I last saw you.”

Shane was implying that he had missed her dearly.

Natalie was nonplussed.

“Okay then. I’ll wait for you at the airport. I have some things to take care of in the meantime anyway.”
