Chapter 621

After they sat down, Genevieve turned to Charlotte and asked, "Isn't this a show? Why are there only women here?"

"This is your first time, isn't it?" Charlotte latched eyes at Genevieve playfully and continued in a mysterious tone, "You'll understand soon."

However, Genevieve could make a rough guess after vaguely overhearing the conversation between the ladies behind her.

Jane also had a hunch. She picked up a glass of champagne and handed it to Genevieve, "Several bars in Nedells offer such entertainment too. However, I've been poorly since young, so I've never even stepped foot in a bar. Since I'm here, I should see what it's all about."

In truth, humans were prurient beings. Since she had the opportunity to watch handsome men showing off their well-built bodies, Genevieve was also reluctant to miss out.

Soon, the lights in the dance hall dimmed. Then, one handsome man after another with tiny waists, broad shoulders, narrow hips, and long legs strutted onto the stage and started stripping off their clothes. As soon as the men revealed their toned and sculpted abs, Genevieve finally realized why they had to put away their phones upon entering.

This show is only meant for the crowd's viewing pleasure, not for taking photos or videos!

Each of the eight men onstage was handsome in their own way. Their movements were fluid and seductive, and the sight of their chiseled abs was enough to make one want to reach out and touch them

Some even knelt close to the edge of the stage so the female patrons could touch them. As the women ran their hands over the men's toned abs, they wished for nothing more than to pull them straight off the stage.

Genevieve quickly shifted her gaze away from Bruce and shot Cooper a sheepish smile. "What a coincidence, Coop! What are you doing here with Bruce?"

Wasn't there a time when he was so mad about Bruce getting too close to me that he wished he could kill Bruce? Why are the both of them hanging out together now?

"I invited him out as a favor to a producer. We have some matters to discuss." Cooper explained briefly. Then, he asked Genevieve, "And you? What are the two of you doing here?"

She answered calmly. "A friend invited us out for a meal, so we thought we'd also catch a... performance."

Cooper's gaze swept over Jane's slightly flushed face. He asked in a doubtful tone, "Why's your face so flushed after you watched a performance? You even ran away when you saw me."

Jane's heart lurched nervously when she saw him glance at her. "I-It was too hot inside. It was sweltering."

Genevieve added, "That's right. Since it was an indoor venue and was very crowded, the air circulation wasn't all that great. Anyway, it's getting late, so you should head home. I'll get going too. Bye!"

With that, she turned to leave.

However, Cooper grabbed her arm again. He called out to a waiter who was about to enter a private room, then pointed at the dance hall Genevieve and Jane had come out of and asked. "What performance is on in there today?"

"Who are you to me? What makes you think you can tell me what to do?" Genevieve pushed Bruce backward with her finger. She could feel his chiseled chest through his clothing.

"Drive the car to the garage of my place," Genevieve ordered with a cold expression.

Bruce acted as though he didn't hear her. With a grim expression, he got out of the car, dragged Genevieve into the elevator, and brought her into his condominium.

Genevieve watched him close the door and fumed, "Bruce, I'm sober this time around. I don't want to be taken advantage of. I would dare you bring me back to your place?"

She went to open the door, but Bruce blocked her. "Get lost," she demanded.

"Bruce, I have a temper, okay?" Genevieve narrowed her eyes and asked, "Do you want to ruin your career in the entertainment industry?"

Bruce stared at her and asked softly, "Ms. Rachford, have I done anything wrong to get you mad?"

"I'm not mad!"

"If you're not, why are you being so aggressive when you talk to me?" Bruce tried to make his point by saying, "I've been thinking about the conversation we had in the hot spring resort. I really don't know what I had said that got you mad."

While they were on the way back. Jane kept glancing at Cooper. Seeing that he kept silent, she didn't dare to utter a word as well.

She kept her head lowered and followed Cooper in when they arrived home.

Cooper threw his jacket onto the couch and went to pour a glass of warm water for Jane. "You are not in good health. Don't go to those stinky places too often."

"I'll never go there again." Jane took the glass of water and nodded obediently. "The show wasn't even that nice."

Cooper washed a half-smile and answered, "It wasn't nice? Why were you blushing, then?"

Jane felt guilty, and she didn't even dare to swallow the water in her mouth. Cooper leaned in and kissed her domineeringly as if he was punishing her.

Jane's limbs were going weak, but fortunately for her, she had the couch to lean on. Otherwise, she would've fallen to the ground.

Suddenly, Cooper's phone rang.

He let go of Jane and took his phone from the couch. After he answered his phone, his expression changed slightly. He then went to the study to continue his phone call.

Jane touched her lips, and she could still feel the warmth left behind by Cooper. At that moment, she could not help but desire more of his kisses.

Cooper had been through a lot, and he wasn't a young man anymore. However, Jane's words made his heart flutter, and he felt like a teenager once more. In fact, he felt as though a girl he had a crush on had just confessed her feelings to him.

Although he liked her a lot, he couldn't find the words to express his feelings.

Cooper hugged Jane tightly and leaned his head on her shoulder. After letting out a sigh, he said, "How lucky I am to have been loved by you."

"I feel the same way." She flashed a faint smile while looking at the platinum ring on her finger.

She then wrapped her arms around his neck and kissed him.

Cooper was tightening his arms around her waist before he eventually let her go. In a hoarse voice, he said, "Go take a shower."

Jane shook her head and pressed her cheek against his. "I want to be with you."

"Be good, okay? We've talked about this."

When Genevieve woke up the next morning, she opened her eyes and saw Bruce looking at her with his arm supporting his head.

How long has he been staring at me

She then remembered how she had been seduced by the sexy man in front of her. Awkwardness and embarrassment surged in her right away. After locking eyes with Bruce for three seconds, she pulled the blanket over her head.

Bruce pulled the blanket down and chuckled softly. "Ms. Rachford, you were the one who took advantage of me. What are you scared of?"

"I'm cold." Genevieve answered calmly. However, her ears had turned red. "Since the sun is up, you should leave, no?"

"Ms. Rachford, we're at my place."

Genevieve froze momentarily before asking in bewilderment, "Didn't you say this place belongs to your friend? Will he kill you if he found out what we've done in his bedroom?"

If Bruce were to bring a girl into my house to do such a thing. I would definitely kill him.

Bruce couldn't help but laugh. "If we both keep our mouths shut, how would he ever find out? Perhaps we should do this at your house next time, Ms. Rachford."

"Next time? You

"Don't know." After two long months, Genevieve, who finally had her craving satisfied, was enjoying the meal prepared by Bruce.

She looked up and glanced at Bruce. "What about you?"

"I want to accompany you." Bruce, with his dark eyes, stared at Genevieve unabashedly.

Genevieve almost choked on her food, and her face flushed red because of the intense coughing

She retrieved two tissues to wipe her mouth and replied, "We're not in a relationship, and I don't need you to accompany me. Whatever resources that you need, just let me know, and I will do my best to secure them for you."

Bruce answered, "If you refuse my company, then it's not right for me to accept anything from you." He continued, "Ms. Rachford, you can treat me as a dispensable tool just like Charlotte."

Shocked, she glared at Bruce. "A-Are you crazy?"

"No, I'm not. I just want to be there for you, yet at the same time, I do not want to pressure you." Bruce put up a straight face. "The moment I become useless to you, then I'll leave."

Every second mattered, and all Bruce wanted was to be by her side, be it for a day or an hour.

Genevieve fell silent as she finished up the breakfast. Then, she went back to her room to change.

After reaching home, Bruce look out the tray and washed the food before having a barbecue at the table with Genevieve.

He was the one who grilled the food, while Genevieve enjoyed the barbecud food to her heart's content.

When Genevieve looked out the floor-to-cciling windows in the living room and saw that it was snowing again, an urge to play in the snow appeared in her mind. Immediately, she put on her down jacket and dragged Bruce down the stairs.

The lights of the artificial lake not far from the house illuminated the path as the snow blanketed the land. There was no one in siglit at all.

Genevieve then grabbed a pile of snow from the ground and rolled it into a ball. Then, she tumed around and throw it at Bruce. When she saw the snow covering his face, she began chuckling

"So now you're throwing snow at me, huh?" the man asked in feigned anger. He then rolled a snowball and threw it at Genevieve as well.

The two of them began having a snowball fight by the artificial lake. Genevieve hit Bruce with the snowballs every time, but when it was Bruce's turn to throw snowballs at her, she would swiftly hide away before hurling another snowball at him.

Excluding her time with her children, Genevieve had never been that happy for a long time.

Frankly, she was hesitant. She did not want to see Bruce around, for she was afraid that she would get trapped in an ambiguous relationship with the man. Yet, at the same time, she needed not to worry about anything when she was with him, and she could be as silly as she wanted to.

"No." Cooper shook his head.

He had been looking through the surveillance footage of when and left the house, and he had searched through all the footage of the places she had gone to. However, she later went somewhere without surveillance cameras, so he failed to track her down.

Furthermore, he was not close to the core members of the police force in Jadeborough, so he could not find a way to get Jane's phone activity.

Genevieve furrowed her brows. "Was there anything amiss when she left?"

"No, she only told me that she wanted to go back to Xedells," Cooper quietly said as he held his forehead. "But at that time, I somehow felt as if I could never see her again."

Yet, back then, he had thought that he was only overthinking things.

If only I took the sense of foreboding more seriously. Everything would have been fine now if I had stopped Jane and asked her to clarify things.

All of a sudden, Steven said, "Mr. Sutton, there's no need for you to hide anything from Ms. Rachford anymore so she won't think that Ms. Jane is deliberately hiding from you."
