Chapter 6

“What? Did you meet Summer’s daddy again?” Jessica and Qyla literally asked at the same time when they met that night at the bar where she used to work.

“Do you really need to be together? Go ahead, get stronger,” he said sarcastically to them.

The two women in front of him looked at each other and when they looked back at him, they both laughed.

“Sorry, nagulat lang kami,” Qyla started as she poured a mild alcoholic drink in her own glass.

Jessica shrugged and did the same as Qyla did. She even offered to her which she rejected.

“You know I don’t drink. I didn’t say goodbye to Mama until ten o’clock. I have to get home before one o’clock, Summer will look for me,” he said and took the soft drink he was drinking from their table.

Qyla patted him on the shoulder and nodded while Jessica smiled.

“Why?” he asked them.

“It’s really mature to have a child, Mare,” Jessica answered. “You are mature enough to think now. It seems like just yesterday, we were in high school and you said you wouldn’t do the assignment because you would just imitate our top one.”

“Gaga! Why did you worry?” he laughed.

“But, let’s get back to the ‘mysterious stranger’ who is the daddy of our child.” It even quoted the word mysterious stranger in the air. “Why did you meet? Where and how? And what was your reaction and his reaction?”

“Just one question at a time,” he complained.

He just laughed and leaned his back against the back of the sofa. They are in one of the VIP’s rooms on the second floor of the bar. It’s quieter there than the first-floor where the dance floor is currently open for those who want to dance.

As usual, even after half past eight at night, the bar was full of customers. Purely young people who are no longer minors at this time, students who want to have fun for a while.

“He’s the owner of Vesarius Airlines,” he began.

The two jumped from their seats as if they had heard an interesting and exciting news.

“Wait,” said Jessica who was still looking at the ceiling of the place as if she was worried about something. “You said his name was Gideon, right?”

He nodded. I think it is known.

“You mean, Gideon Vesarius is Summer’s daddy?” he asked with wide eyes.

He reluctantly nodded because he was estimating that the two in front of him were just about to grab him from where he was sitting.

“You know him?”

He shook his head but still had a big smile on his face. “Not really but I’ve seen him. He is Kuya Ali’s best friend,” he said. Ali is referring to the ‘supposedly’ friend of his older brother.

“Friend, the handsomeness of that one, like Kuya Ali, can drop underwear. If only I didn’t really notice that Ate was in denial about her feelings, oh my! Kuya Ali wrote that for a long time.”

He winced because of Jessica’s dreamy expression. It’s obvious that she has a crush on that Alejandro Almeradez.

“That’s it,” she continued. “You know that I want to do on-the-job training at Vesarius Airlines, right? It will have a big effect on my resume and the future of those accepted there is good.”

He snorted and took the soft drinks from the table. She took a sip as she remembered what happened earlier.

“But sad to say, he is the owner. He knows my secret. He didn’t even give me a chance to say why I deserve to train in his company. Why,” she swallowed, she wanted to cry, “who really wants to have an employee who sold himself for money?”

“Hey, don’t say that,” Qyla said to him but there was concern attached to it.

“Did he say in front of you that he will not accept you because of what you have done? Why! That’s stupid, ah!” Jessica said annoyed as if she wasn’t a pre-school teacher and was acting mad again.

“No.” He laughed a little so that his friend calmed down who looked like a bully. “He just didn’t give me a chance. After he kissed me, he said I’m done.”

For the hundredth time that day, Gideon’s passionate kiss came to his mind again.

“What?!” Qyla and Jessica asked in unison. “He kissed you?”

He was stunned in front of his friends. Did he tell that incident?

Heck! Yes, he said and he will surely bombard him with questions again.

“You responded? Did something more happen than that? Is it delicious h*****k?”

He’s saying that!

In the end, there was nothing he could do but talk about them. These two girls are her best friend. They were with her on her darkest and challenging days. Also, these two know his secret about his son’s true identity. There is no reason for him to hide from them.

“Are you going to tell him about Summer?” asked Qyla.

He sighed. That’s what occupied his mind earlier in the cafeteria of Vesarius Airlines. “I do not know. He is powerful and rich. I don’t know if I should introduce Summer to him.”

He doesn’t know if he will accept his son. Knowing that her daughter is a product of one-night full of I(u)st. No love intervened between them that night. Gideon has lust and she was after the money she will get from him at that time. That’s it and nothing else. It was all purely business.

He is afraid of the reaction and will tell when he meets Summer. She can’t take to see her daughter hurting. He doesn’t want his son to experience rejection at such a young age.

He didn’t even know if he had a wife and a child. His family might be in trouble if he tells the man about Summer. Didn’t it say that the man was thirty-three?

With that handsomeness and wealth, it’s impossible not to have it.

“But you know he has the right to know Summer because he’s the father, right?” Jessica groin. It was serious this time. It’s not the same as before who was laughing again.

“Yes. Mama told me that no matter what happens, he is still Summer’s father. But, I’m just scared for my baby. I don’t want to let her feel unwanted. He’s still young. What if his father doesn’t like him?”

"We understand you," Qyla said and moved to sit next to him. Jessica did the same, placing him in the middle of the seat. "But you won't get the answers to your questions and what if's if you don't try. After all, there is no secret that cannot be revealed."

"We also don't want Summer to get hurt. That boy is like our son. He grew up that we could follow. But isn't it better that he knows the truth early? Sooner or later, it will definitely find daddy."

"She did last week," he said and touched the candle, thinking of the picture of Gideon he had that he took from the wallet he left on the hotel sofa.

"See? But whatever your decision is, we will respect it and support you."

She smiled at them, almost teary eyed. Kapag ganitong may girl-bestfriend moment nila, it was always the best.
