

Remarriage Never And Go Away Chapter 1175-1180

Chapter 1175 Depressed Jordy

Gloria frowned. "What's this about?"

"Let's grab something to eat."

Met with her puzzlement, Jordy explained, "It's not the time for us to go back yet. We can eat something first."

She didn't refuse since she was indeed a bit hungry. She hadn't eaten much for lunch.

She was no longer so repulsive to him. In the past, she hated him because of their divorce. She hated him because he let her down. As time went by, she got over it. She no longer cared if she loathed him or not, and his indifference no longer upset her.

It didn't bother her that he was in touch with another woman. They had divorced after all. He was free to date anyone since he was single now. She felt nothing about the fact that Jordy and Rachel were dating.

She had moved on. She was fine with it as long as Jordy didn't cause trouble or force her against her will.

It was not a big deal to eat with him, either. They would go to the old house together anyway. It was unnecessary to avoid him for several minutes. It would only be a waste of time. This arrangement was more convenient. If there were any trending topics about this, Karen would be delighted if she saw them. It had been her wish that they could be back together. Gloria was willing to do this for

Karen.

During the meal, Gloria ate with ease and had no intention of striking up a conversation, although an excellent man was at the same table.

Her demeanor was elegant and relaxed. People felt no pressure around her.

Jordy was dazed. This feeling was something he had never had before.

It seemed they had never eaten at the same table like this when they were married.

He couldn't help recalling the days before they got married. There were no misunderstandings between them, and they hung out several times.

Back then, Gloria was always smiling. She was lively and talkative.

Now her attention was all on the food. She no longer cared about him.

His eyes went dim. It was a shame that she paid no attention to him the entire time. Moreover, his sullen look would not upset her even if she saw it. Jordy wasn't aware that the feeling was called depression.

She put down her fork and knife, showing no intention of waiting for him.

Jordy, who hadn't eaten much, also put down the tableware.

She looked at him and asked, "Done?"

She was a little hesitant. It seemed he hadn't eaten much.

Jordy gave no response. The look on his face was gloomy.

Unperturbed, Gloria looked away, checked out the time on her phone, and found that the working hours hadn't ended yet. She thought for a moment and suggested.

Chapter 1176 No Position in His Heart

"Karen also surfs the internet on her phone. I'm sure people have taken pictures of us and uploaded them to the internet, so why don't we go now?"

Jordy got up without a word.

His attitude made Gloria believe that he was unwilling to talk to her.

It didn't unnerve her. That was the mode of their interaction. She had no position in Jordy's heart anyway. In the past, she might be saddened. Now she didn't even care. It was great that he left her alone.

She got up and followed him to get out.

Jordy had called Carlos. The latter was on his way to the old house.

Gloria got into the car and buckled up. Jordy remained silent along the way.

Feeling bored, she took out her phone and browsed Twitter.

She tried to search for relevant content about Rachel, but there was none. The photos of them leaving the office and dining at the restaurant were exposed though.

The comments were varied.

Some people commented that they were a perfect match. Some thought they shouldn't be in touch after they got married. Some were against it, saying that it was normal for them to have business cooperation.

Others sympathized with Rachel.

Gloria curled her lips, seeing the comments as jokes. If she took them seriously, people would taunt her and call her unrealistic.

Actually, she hadn't expected to be on trending topics so frequently after the divorce. She had never tried to take the tweets down either. It was not a good practice. The old guns were still in the know. It would only make things worse in the end.

For example...

After Rachel took those tweets down, the netizens started to taunt her by fitting her into melodramatic plays, and more people joined in the crusade.

Gloria browsed for a moment and then put her phone away. Probably, she had made another enemy. In the past, Rachel simply did not like her but took no action. She was afraid that Rachel would be enticed to work against her.

Rachel would be a formidable foe. Although Gloria was not afraid of trouble, she didn't fancy it either.

Jordy focused on driving and had no intention of talking to her, nor did he know what was on her mind. Soon, they arrived at the old house.

Karen's eyes flashed with joy when she saw them. "You're here. You guys shouldn't have eaten outside."

Gloria's eyes flickered. Sure enough, Karen had seen the tweets.

Jordy said, "It wouldn't be called a date if we ate here."

Gloria was speechless.

Aware that he was trying to make Karen happy, she didn't argue about it. Karen's mood was what mattered.

Chapter 1177 Dating

Karen froze and asked incredulously, "What? What were you saying? Say that again. I didn't quite follow you."

Gloria felt helpless.

It was not that Karen didn't hear him. She was just amazed and tried to confirm it.

Jordy went to the sofa and sat down without a word.

Not ready to give up, Karen laid her eyes on Gloria. "What's going on? Gloria, what was that kid saying? What did you guys do?"

Gloria's eyes flickered. For a moment, she didn't know what to say. It was their plan to deceive Karen, but she found it hard to lie. She was against the idea and would rather not get entangled with Jordy even if their relationship was false.

Jordy read her mind, and his eyes dimmed.

He was not happy about her repulsion.

Karen, however, was bent on getting to the bottom of it. Although she had heard it, she was not certain. Taking Gloria's silence for her shyness, Karen went to Jordy's side, sat down next to him, and stared at him. "What were you saying? A date?"

Jordy turned to her and said, "Why? You heard me."

"Kid, is this how you talk to your grandma? I've been worried about you all these years. Now I just want a definite answer."

Jordy glanced at Gloria who pranced over and sat down across from them with no intention of denying it. He then said, "Yeah, we were on a date."

Gloria's eyelashes fluttered. She pursed her lips but said nothing.

Once upon a time, she was expectant to hear this from his mouth.

Even if he was saying that to her alone, she would jump for joy.

She had waited so long but had not expected to hear it on such an occasion. They no longer had feelings for each other, or to be precise, she no longer loved him. This might be fate.

She dropped her head, too ashamed to face the excited grandmother and grandson. She felt guilty even though it was a white lie.

Karen mistook Gloria's reaction for her shyness. Her eyes started to shine.

"A date! Why did you come here? I don't want to be the third wheel. Go around with Gloria or go to the cinema with her. Dating should be romantic. It's not fun to stay with an old lady." She was thrilled and talked a lot.

Gloria was at a loss.

Karen was always so enthusiastic.

Jordy said, "We indeed plan to go to the cinema later, but it's still early, so we came to see you. The thing is..."

He paused to make it mysterious. Karen was expecting to hear their plan, but he stopped halfway through his speech. Not happy about it, she sulked, "Come on, don't keep me in suspense!"

Chapter 1178 A Hard-Won Date

She itched to punch her grandson.

She had to wait for Jordy to continue. She had heard it but wanted to confirm it with him.

The two kids had been torturing each other. The happy days were coming.

She urged him, "What is it? Are you keeping certain things from me? But I'm delighted to hear this. You guys are young and free to do whatever you like."

She was thrilled but somewhat ill at ease. Something seemed to be off, or maybe she had worried too much about them.

Following a glance at her, Jordy said, "There is something else."

Karen frowned. "I don't care about your other business. Now I only want to know if you guys were dating."

In her view, a date proceeded after a couple established their relationship.

Gloria's eyes flickered. She pursed her lips.

Jordy frowned and hummed, "Yeah."

Karen's eyes lit up.

Jordy admitted it. What else could she expect? It showed they were really dating.

Overjoyed, she turned to look at Gloria who kept her head low. Karen took it for her shyness.

Wonderful!

They're finally back together!

Her joy was beyond words.

"Good, you guys are back together. Now you can tell me about your business."

She didn't pursue the matter as she saw through their embarrassment. She was content to learn about their current situation.

Jordy looked at his grandma and said, "Carlos told me that you should have another shot."

The smile on her face froze. "Another shot?"

An injection was the last thing she wanted.

Her happy mood was affected by the news.

Jordy said, "You're short of various vitamins. If you refuse now, you'll have to receive more injections in the future."

Karen was speechless.

Gloria said with a smile, "To suffer less, I think you should agree."

Karen understood the situation. The couple said it was still early. Turned out it was just an excuse. Their real intention was to persuade her to take the shot.

Not stupid, she knew that Jordy could have the film played at any moment.

Then again, she didn't want to drag them down. "Okay, I'll take the shot. I don't need you guys to keep me company. Just go ahead with your plan. Carlos will be here soon, right? I'll wait for him."

Her tone was easy. Not lying to them, she just didn't want to interrupt their hard-won date.

Chapter 1179 I'm Ready

Jordy crossed his long legs and said, "It's not the appointed time yet."

Gloria chimed in, "It's still early. We'll go after you take the shot."

She had told Carlos about the plan. The man knew what to do.

Before Karen could respond, the doorbell rang. Gloria said, "It should be Carlos."

She looked over and saw the housekeeper going to open the door. With a medical kit in his hand, Carlos came in.

He saw everyone in the living room and smiled, "Karen, we meet again."

Karen grunted, "Our meetings are always unforgettable."

Carlos coughed, "It was just an accident."

Karen shook her head and rolled up her sleeves. "Come on, I'm ready!"

Carlos gave her a surprised look. His eyes then fell on Gloria and Jordy. How did they persuade the old lady?

In the past, Karen was resistant even if she had to accept it in the end.

How come she is so cooperative today?

How did they make it?

He didn't know that Jordy and Gloria had agreed on a plan.

Karen was willing to take the shot so that they could go on a date.

She conceded for their sake.

After a pause, Carlos smiled, "Okay, let's start."

He came to Karen's side, felt her nervousness, and said, "Karen, you've taken a lot of shots over the years. It doesn't hurt much."

Karen sighed, "I know. I'm just afraid of the needle. It makes me dizzy and nervous. It's a long-time problem that dies hard."

Carlos prepared to start the injection as the medicine was ready.

Karen tensed up and looked away.

Gloria went to her side, grabbed her hand, and said, "Karen, don't be afraid. It's okay."

"I know." The old lady shut her eyes so tightly that Gloria saw her trembling eyelashes and wrinkles. Her entire body was taut.

Sitting on the side, Jordy pursed his lips.

Without further ado, Carlos started his work.

Karen gasped in fear but didn't move. After a while, the needle was pulled out.

Carlos smiled, "It's done."

Karen opened her eyes and relaxed.

Gloria was holding her hand the entire time.

She sighed, "Finally, but how many more shots do I have to take?"

Chapter 1180 Mend His Ways

In the end, she looked up at Carlos. She seemed to have been prepared.

Carlos froze. Truth be told, he had no clue either. He just followed Gloria's instructions.

He couldn't reveal it to her. With a smile on his face, he said with ease, "That depends on what vitamins you're short of. If you're fine, you don't need another shot."

Karen sighed and analyzed the situation, "So, I'll have to take more shots if I'm short of vitamins."

Carlos made no comments.

Gloria interposed, "Karen, you should get well and stay positive. If you lose your temper, you may have to take shots."

"Is that so?" Karen was scared.

Carlos knew what Gloria was implying. He noticed Karen's gaze and nodded.

"It's true. Anger is bad for your health. The lack of vitamins is related to that, so you should stay positive."

Karen was torn. "I want to, but the old man sometimes pisses me off."

Old Joseph had given her attitude countless times because of Gloria. She was upset whenever she thought about it. To avoid injections, she took a deep breath and did her best to contain her emotions.

Gloria laughed, "Joseph chatted with me the other day. He said that he had straightened his thinking."

Karen gaped at her. "What? He called you?"

Gloria nodded with a smile. "Yeah, he had straightened his thinking. He said that he used to dislike but the children have their own lives. He even apologized to me, hoping that I would forgive him. He made a big compromise."

Karen found it hard to believe. "You can't be serious. How is that possible?"

She didn't believe it, but the words were from Gloria's mouth. It made her hesitant.

If anyone else, Jordy included, told her this, she would not be convinced.

Gloria nodded and smiled, "It's true. I won't lie about such a thing."

Karen blinked but still doubted it. She took it for a joke and shook her head. "Girl, you don't have to coax me. I'll be content if that stubborn man doesn't talk back. He just would never apologize to a junior."

Then what Joseph said yesterday occurred to her and made her hesitant again. Did the old man really mend his way?

Is this true?

She couldn't believe it.

"As sure as fate." Gloria wasn't lying. Old Joseph indeed said that to her. In fact, he tried to tell Karen about this through Gloria. He wanted her to be happy.

Gloria paused and added, "You can ask Joseph about it if you don't believe me.

Karen blinked. For a moment, she didn't know how to respond. After a while, she said, "Okay, I'll ask him when he comes back."

She then looked over at Gloria.
