Chapter 1261

Nicole walked into the office on her own, and all of a sudden, Ike appeared in front of her, holding something in his hand.

“Nicole, I found some of the materials you wanted.” Ike handed her the materials, prompting her to hurriedly take and inspect them.

After confirming that it was what she wanted, she looked at him and said, ‘ Thank you.’”

“I’m sorry that it’s not much,” Ike replied, still feeling guilty about the fact that he could not aid Nicole when she needed help.

“Don’t say that. I’m very grateful that you’ve managed to acquire them.

Now, I can carry the experiment out another two more times,” she said, the corners of her mouth lifting slightly.

“Yeah, okay. Good luck. I won’t keep you for long. I need to get myself some food.” Ike hurried off to the direction of the restaurant after he was done speaking to her.

Nicole looked at the person in charge of the equipment, and the staff proceeded to press the button on the contraptions.

Everyone was staring at their computers, with Nicole focusing her gaze on the equipment at the same time. A few minutes later, the process halted, and just like that, a brand-new chip was produced, prompting Nicole to look at the chip with a smile on her face. Then, some of the staff members opened the casing, brought the chip out, and handed it to Nicole.

Nicole was filled with satisfaction as she looked at the chip in her hand. She did not expect that they would actually be able to produce one. Everyone was brimming with excitement as they stared at the chip in Nicole's hands as well; they had finally succeeded in producing the chip after working on it for so long.

Then, Nicole walked up to an engineer and ordered, "Test the chip."

"Okay." The engineer grabbed the chip at once and inserted it into another device for testing purposes. Everyone gathered around to watch, and just like Nicole, they kept their eyes on the screen, not averting their gaze for even a moment.

The test result appeared on the screen after a while, with Nicole staring at it intently. The results showed that the performance of the chip they had made was not up to standard, prompting her to make her way back to her seat in disappointment. The excitement that had filled the room earlier dissipated at once. All of them fell back on their seats in frustration, and the office suddenly became quiet.

After a long while, Harvey stood up and said, "Let's not be discouraged. Although the performance of the chip is not up to standard, we've at least made a breakthrough. We've actually produced a chip!"

Carl looked at Mr. Pearce and said, "Mr. Pearce, where's the central control room?"

"This way, please." Mr. Pearce immediately understood what Carl meant and proceeded to lead him to that room.

Carl and the men who had stayed behind followed Mr. Pearce to the central control room, after which he opened the door and began with the process of inspection with his men.

After he had examined the surveillance system in the room, he turned around and ordered, "Install some surveillance cameras outside."

"Yes, sir."

As the whole area was being set up, Carl stayed back in the central control room and took over from there.

Nicole squinted her eyes slightly as she watched the sunset...

Kelly had tried her best to chase after them, but Harvey was nowhere to be seen. After searching high and low, she decided to head back to the office and wait for them.

Suddenly, the door to the office swung open, and Kelly looked over to see Harvey and Nicole, at which point she immediately walked over and asked, "Where have you been, Miss Riddle? I've been searching for you everywhere."

"Don't worry, we're fine," Nicole assured as she noticed Kelly's worried expression.

The trio got into the car, and Nicole proceeded to drive off to her hotel. However, she did not anticipate that the person who was hiding outside of their base to immediately follow her when he saw her leaving.

Nicole did not tell Kelly and Harvey about her stalker, as she did not know about it. After driving for some time, it dawned upon her that a car had been following her for a while now. Then, she smiled and slammed the brakes, halting the car in front of a mall.

Harvey saw that it was not their hotel, and so, he asked, "This is the mall. Why did you stop here?"

"Bring Kelly along and buy me something here. I want to bring something back for my grandma." Nicole said, making an excuse up.

"And you're not coming along to buy something for her?" Harvey looked at her with his brows furrowed.

"I've ordered something, and it just got delivered, so I've got to retrieve it. Just get off," Nicole urged as she glanced over to the car that was following behind her.

The man nodded, after which Nicole took a deep breath and lifted her foot off his chest. Then, she left the area, but not before she kicking him once more, knocking him unconscious.

Once she had left the area, she got to her car and made her way back to the mall.

"Come out, Harvey." Nicole beckoned through the phone.

"We need more time as we're not done yet," Harvey replied. "Are you back already?"

“Mr. Johnston, Miss Riddle took care of her stalker, who had already passed out by the time we arrived.”

“We can’t tell for now, but our men are following her already. Well hear from them soon.”

“You must report to me the minute you receive any news regarding Nicole,” Jared ordered.

“Yes, Mr. Johnston. And what are we going to do with Miss Riddle’s stalker? ’ Max’s man asked.

The next morning, Harvey was already done packing as he waited for Nicole and Kelly in the morning.

Harvey waited in his room for a very long time, but no one had bothered to knock on his door. 'Is Kelly not awake as well? They said that the flight was eight in the morning last night.'

Harvey then looked at the time. It was already half past six in the morning, but Nicole and Kelly were nowhere to be found.

Harvey left his room and went over to Nicole's room before knocking on the door, and as expected, nobody answered the door, even after a long time. 'Is she still sleeping? I'll just head over to Kelly's room, then.'

He went over to Kelly's room and knocked on it. After a while, the door opened, revealing Kelly who was garbed in neat clothing, showing that she was already done preparing.

'Kelly, let's have breakfast in 5 minutes,' Harvey said.

"Sure, Harvey. Did you just come from Miss Riddle's room?" Kelly blinked at him.

"Yeah, why?" Harvey frowned. 'Is something wrong?'

“No, I wake up around this time every day,” Harvey said in a serious tone of voice.

“Lies. You’d only knock on my door at around seven in the morning,” Nicole replied, exposing him.

In response, Harvey smiled and explained, “I was just afraid that you’d still be sleeping, so I’d always go come over only after I’m done eating.

“Didn’t you notice that I’d always bring you breakfast every time I knock on your door?” Harvey smirked, giving off an air of slyness.

It was then that Nicole came to this realization. ‘So that’s why.’

“Are you done packing?” Nicole asked them while she ate.

‘Yeah, we can leave for the airport once we’re done with breakfast,” Kelly said.

'It hurts!"

'Do you want me to break your arm before you would answer my question? ' Nicole questioned him, her gaze cold. She was not expecting anybody from the McCarthy family to follow her into the plane at all.

It was at that moment that the air marshals heard them. They came over and saw Nicole pinning a man down on the floor. So, they approached the man and subdued him before telling Nicole, "Well take over from here."

Nicole did not wish to do that, but she figured that as she was still on the plane, she had to give in to avoid getting into more problems.

Then, she whispered into the air marshal's ear, "This person is behaving very suspiciously. You've got to find out who sent him here."

The air marshal looked at Nicole and gave her a frown before taking the person away. Then, the stewardess came over to calm the other passengers down.

Then, Harvey looked at Nicole and asked, "What happened?"
