

Her Billionaire 610

Chapter 610 Unwillingness to Part

However, Daniella tugged Veronica's hand and led her into the house. They sat in the bedroom as the mother clung unwillingly to the daughter's hand. "Roni, I can't believe that you're about to get married soon. After your marriage, you've got to learn to be a good wife and behave maturely. You can't stay a childish one forever, got it?"

"Gosh, Mom! I know that I'll always be a child in your eyes."

Veronica hugged Daniella affectionately and said coyly, "I'm not marrying off to somewhere distant and I'll be able to come home anytime I want. Besides, if you can't bear to part with me, then move to the city with me."

"Your dad and I have lived in the countryside for our entire lives and we're used to it here. We definitely won't be moving into the city. We just wish for a life of happiness for the two of you."

"Mom, you're the best!" Veronica lifted her head and noticed Daniella's reddened eyes. At that point, Veronica could not help bursting into laughter. "Mom, I'm just getting married and it's not a sad matter. Why are you crying?"

As soon as Veronica said that, Daniella smacked her on the back of her head. "You little brat! You were such a tiny little thing when you were a child..."

you tirelessly, and your dad and I worried so much about you. Now that we've finally raised you into a wonderful woman, we haven't even got to enjoy you for more than two years and you're about to marry into another family soon. I would of course be..." As can't bear to

to come home regularly. During New Year's, we can alternate up to her desk before opening the drawer to obtain a to Veronica and opened the box. "I've got something for very curious as she was unsure of what was inside the red item wrapped in it looked as good as new. The emerald stones were translucent in the air and the clarity was perfect too. At a glance, you've kept such planning to keep this from me if I didn't get