

Her Billionaire 644

Chapter 644 Matthew's Back

Veronica got out of the car, and Yvette held an umbrella over her. She handed Veronica a red scarf. "It's cold. You should wear this."

Yvette was a slender woman. She wore a long black coat that accentuated her waist. Her hair was cropped short, which brought out her features even more. She was an aloof woman, to begin with, and with her wearing gold-rimmed glasses, she looked more like a handsome woman than a beautiful lady.

"Thank you." Veronica looked at her in surprise and took the scarf from her before wearing it around her own neck.

"It's nothing. Thomas told me to do this," Yvette said.

Veronica merely acknowledged it without saying anything further. She took the umbrella from Yvette and darted into the Kings Residence. She went through the yard and passed over the man-made bridge until she was finally in the backyard.

she reached the place, she could hear Elizabeth yelling, "Don't just stand there. I want to see Matthew, and you're calling him here right the snow beneath her. It felt like her heart was getting even colder. She closed the umbrella and handed it to Yvette, and then she clenched her fists before heading toward Elizabeth. "Grandma?"

was pointing her crutch at the servants as she yelled at them. Veronica exchanged a look with Yura, and the latter shook her head. There you doing, Grandma? I told you Matthew's overseas. You don't have to worry about him." Veronica went up to Elizabeth and stopped before her, holding her hand as dementia under control with medications, but Matthew's disappearance had hit her greatly, and it granddaughter-in-law." She forced a smile and put Elizabeth's hand on

Elizabeth's face was then

Yura waved at the servants, telling suddenly frowned again. "I want to see Matthew. Call past, she had been nothing but the epitome of elegance, so the current