

Her Billionaire 669

Chapter 669 Matthew's Held at Gunpoint

Castron had a relatively low population density, and there were even fewer people to be seen around them since they were on the outskirts of the city. The streets didn't even have any street lights.

Veronica got out of the car, and she had to rely on their car headlights to see that there were three cars behind them and two in front of them. More than ten men pushed their doors open and got out of the five cars.

Someone who was in the van at the back was pushed out in a wheelchair. Veronica felt her heart sinking when she saw the person. "Matt?" she uttered.

"Hey, Veronica. It's been a while." A familiar female voice sounded in the crowd, and Veronica turned over to find Tiffany walking out from the group of men. She was dressed in a tight, black suit, and she had a bob cut that seemed to sharpen her features. She looked extremely foxy and seductive.

It was then that Veronica realized how she hadn't seen Tiffany in more than a year. "Tiffany, why... Why did you kidnap Matt?" Veronica asked before sending Thomas a side glare. "What are you guys doing? Why didn't you tell me that Matt got kidnapped?" she hissed.

himself. "I... I wanted to tell you, but Master Crayson didn't allow me to. Furthermore, they all said

Matthew, who was sitting in the wheelchair, spoke to her with the use of you're fine?! You got kidnapped!"

my eyes well up with tears." Tiffany walked over to Matt and held onto the mute now. Ah... how heartbreaking," she uttered. "Let go my attacks!" Tiffany had come up with a detailed plan before meeting Veronica siblings, after all—I wanted you to know what was going on before

Matthew's hair and pulled a gun out to hold it against his temple. "Kneel down, or I'll kill him now!"

so he was practically no different from a farm animal that could be slaughtered at any time. He couldn't even protest