

The Heir's Revenge by Twine Twin Chapter 21

Overtime

Jesselyn listens to Raymond's rambling halfway but her fake face is still smiling as if she's listening to the whole thing.

"Looks like we can incite Bella Caithlin to be on our side dear." Raymond was now sitting at Jesselyn's feet leaning his head on the bed and guiding Jesselyn indirectly to rub his head. "Our side?" "Yes, our side to destroy Dennis." Jesselyn was silent for a moment. Remembering how Dennis was treating again. The embers of anger returned to Jesselyn. "Why are you silence? You're still thinking about making up again with that ex-husband huh?"

"We will repay them. We make him regret it." Jesselyn's gaze was full of anger.

Raymond smiled faintly. "Putting all that grudge aside how about we do something fun?" "Honey, I just got hot outside. I think I should take a shower." Raymond furrowed his brows. "Not because you want to subtly reject me?"

Jesselyn smiled, more like trying to smile. "Honey, what are you talking about? of course not. How could I give you a body of dust smell."

"So? Then we can take a bath together!" Raymond stood up. "Didn't you just finish showering?" Jesselyn asked. "There's no rule not to take a shower after a shower."

Jesselyn held Raymond's body which was about to carry her. "Honey, why do you seem impatient. Wait for me just a moment I will prepare myself as best as I can first for you. We haven't done it since we got married, have we? I want our delayed first night to be very good in front of my husband."

Jesselyn tried to seduce Raymond with a sweet excuse. Luckily the man was devoured by that bullshit. Raymond smiled now. "Okay! I'm waiting, but don't take too long okay!" Jesselyn chuckled. "Patient, dear!" she said. "Jesselyn, don't play with me."

"No, love. Oh! How can you trust me again? I need scrubs and stuff which will probably take some time. But I will try to finish it as soon as possible. Be patient dear! Just a few moments."

Raymond nodded his head again. "Okay!" said the man.

Jesselyn then entered the bathroom. "Honey, don't you think you just take off your clothes in front of me?" "Do not, love. If I do you'll get impatient later. And what was my intention didn't come true."

Raymond was completely hands off now. Jesselyn managed to get into the bathroom. As soon as she got there he immediately turned sour face. She cursed Raymond silently with her disgusted face. If she didn't need Raymond's money he didn't want to play it like that.

Dennis stretched his stiff muscles from working too long. He yawned slightly as he glanced at the clock It's a little past midnight. He didn't expect it to take so long to check all kinds of reports. Dennis took his bag and coat, after he left the room.

"Finally you came out too!" Tiara who was originally face down lifted her face with a slight yawn.

"Tiara?" asked Dennis. Naturally the man was surprised. When everyone had gone home, it was only the two of them there. Dennis thought Tiara had been home since the afternoon. "Ehm..." the woman said covering her mouth yawning.

"You're not home yet?"

Tiara nodded her head. "How can I go home when you're not home yet. I have to wait for you. Isn't that the secretary's job?" Dennis chuckled lightly. "Neither Tiara. You can go home when it's time to go home. Overtime when I ordered overtime." "Ah... why didn't you tell me from the afternoon."

"Why didn't you ask from this afternoon?" Dennis didn't want to lose.

"Yes sir. Sorry!" said Tiara. Dennis smiled faintly who knew what was funny. Maybe laughing at Tiara's protesting style behind her apology. They then walked hand in hand into the elevator.

"Good night sir!" said Tiara bowed as a farewell today to her boss.

Dennis nodded his head. But when the man was about to get into his car he stopped for a moment. "Tiara!" he called out to her again.

“Yes, Sir?!”

“What did you come home with?” Dennis asked near the car door.

“City bus or train. Whatever’s still operating.”

“You go home with me alone.” Dennis decided.

“With you?” repeated Tiara again to make sure. Dennis nodded his head. “Please come in Tiara. I’m so exhausted.”

Tiara nodded, immediately ran to Dennis’s car. Sit down beside the man. Tiara then mentioned her address to Dennis. The man didn’t protest much. Take notes on the navigation of his cellphone and then follow the directions listed there.

“You pass this street every day?” Dennis asked after they reached a narrow alley gap but Dennis’s car could still pass. “Well, I can only rent a place like this for the time being.” “Even some of the street lights are out. I’ve lived in an environment like this, Tiara. I know what forms of crime can occur. I can’t imagine if you actually went home alone tonight.” Dennis spoke sadly about Tiara’s place of residence

Tiara took a deep breath before speaking, “Nevermind, sir! This neighborhood is already better than I had to live on the streets, Living in an environment like this is already very expensive, sir!”

“Once again I’ve been in that position, I understand your thinking.” Dennis responded. “In the middle of a city that is classified as advanced but has a high standard of living like this, we can’t complain much, sir. We can only be more grateful.” Tiara added with a faint smile on the woman’s lips. Dennis glanced at Tiara for a bit. “How many people are there in your house?” Dennis switched to another question.

“Your mother is working or...” Tiara turned to Dennis. “My mother used to work in the laundry. After I was accepted to work at the television station, I asked my mother to quit. Now Mom is just at home.” Dennis heard the girl’s story then nodded his head. “Lucky you still have mother. I never felt at all. Not when I was Lewis’ son or where I am now.”

“But you have a father and you have a grandma. Your life is also better. very good even compared to me.” Dennis smiled. “You’re such a positive thinker, aren’t you?!” “I’m just trying to be grateful for everything, sir. Gratitude makes us happy.” Dennis rubbed his own head. “Aren’t you too naive?!” “Naive or not the important thing is to be happy.” Dennis shrugged his shoulders. He didn’t refute Tiara’s thoughts. He appreciates that. “My house is on the right, sir!” Dennis nodded his head then pulled the car over. Several people were drinking alcohol not far away. fortunately Tiara has arrived in front of her house. Something must have happened to Tiara if she had taken public transportation. He don’t know if Tiara can arrive safely at her house or not. “Next time, if you want to accompany me overtime, tell me first!”

Tiara’s lips advanced a few inches. “If I had known that I didn’t have to wait for you, I wouldn’t have chosen overtime.”

Dennis smiled at Tiara’s response. He wasn’t offended. “Thanks for the ride, Tiara.” Tiara’s lips are advancing, “Thanks for the ride, sir!” she understood Dennis was making fun of her. After that the woman came out. Don’t forget Tiara bowed respectfully before the woman disappeared from behind the door, fully entered into her house.

Dennis made sure it was all just after he started the car again shaking his head. Exactly at half past two Dennis’s car entered the trunk
