Chapter 20 Spark Your Fires And Burn

The beginning of the end was about to be sealed by the hands of Frankenstein Creature or probably, its another misunderstanding that's about to be recorded and written inclusively into the history books.

No traces of fears, no desperation after we'd hike through the narrow-way to awake our dragon companions, who were having a peaceful siesta in a mountain and not wanting to be disturbed by anyone or anything.

I know its all gonna be a strenuous and unpredictable scenario, I could sense danger, so I presume that I wanted to have a speech with the lord eternal, Karma-Kalm.

Fairest one, I called unto Yoshida. Can I have a word with the lord eternal, Karma-Kalm?
After his disappearance, there haven't been traces of him anywhere.

Its too late now, Yoshida replied me.
You may not see the Eternal One, Karma-Kalm ever again, but I can assure you, his presence is always with you.
If you'll listen to yourself, you'll hear him speaking to you when you needed the most, trust me.
Immediately she'd finish narrating on her ordeal, a voice, some mystic voice whispers into my head saying, "She's telling you the truth" and I was so shocked by the outcome of that experience.

Did you hear that voice? A voice just spoke to me, it seems it is the voice of the lord eternal, Karma-Kalm.

Yes, it is, I heard him too. Its confirming to you that I'm telling the truth. So you have to believe me, Frankenstein.

Fairest one, If I do not believe in you, I wouldn't have followed you here, not even to join in a quest to make quarrels with some Red and Black dragons.

We both smiled, and there were some connection and deep attraction existing between the both of us, but they were all objected for the cause of our mission. A mission that will save the planets, ninth realms of mystic creatures from the plague of the "End of days."

Suddenly we'd arrived, the evidence was visible on the tiny openings above the rocky matter, it was reflecting sunlight into our path.

Signs were all over the place, showing that we're already at uplands.

Fairest one, look at those light rays, the narrow way leads us here.

Finally I'm back again, uplands.

You can be happy Frankenstein Creature, I'd rather be focus and be ready for what lies ahead, because the time is already at hand.

The time, surely, has come before you, therefore, spark your fires and burn, before your dragon companions devours you.

I don't know how prepared I am, Fairest one, but I do know that I'm ready for Queen Dragon and King Dragon.

Lets make our way using that other point.
