

I Have Immortalized: I Frankenstein by Simon E. Evans

Chapter 23

Authors Note: "Warning" story may contain mystery and strong language, readers discretion is advised.

Chapter 23 More Practice, The More Experience

Thick Darkness overshadows the nights, as the moon clouds began surfacing. There was a mixed reaction of lightnings and Rain, embedded in the soul of the sky as the thunder echo in their voices.

Yoshida and I both came to a conclusion that its about to rain so heavily. Shortly, before the rain began showering from the night-sky, Yoshida demands we seek shelter somewhere below hills until the rain stops falling.

ADVERTISEMENT

We can't stay here, let's seek shelter, from the rain, Yoshida anxiously insisted. But for a warrior of my kind, there's no rest of spirit, until the sword of hades, I'm holding unto, in my arm locates its sheath.

Find your way, Fairest one, I said, in a low voice. I'll be fine being all alone this time.

ADVERTISEMENT

She was troubled because I refuse heeding to her call, nonetheless, she left on her own accord, while I remain in the centre of the stormy rain.
I stood in the rain encompassed by shadows of darkness brought upon me by the night sky, I held firmly the sword of hades to my right arm while learning the trios of hails, rain and lightnings and the limits of endurance it requires to resist a storm and to survive in a deadly storm.

ADVERTISEMENT

I remembered being in a situation under, under the rain, that made me unconscious, due to excessive coldness absorbed into my diaphragm.
This time was so different, because the immortal Gods awakened within me, the warrior spirit within me was finally bonded with the legend of its ancestors and even though a flood gate is let loosed, I'll smile over it.

ADVERTISEMENT

I Frankenstein creature, demon hunter and beast slayer began reprogramming and picturing the hail storms as a dragon. Automated by my sensory reprogramming, the sword of hades reactivated, it turned reddish brown and the flames appeared on it again. Possibly, I just learned on how to ignite it,s power.

ADVERTISEMENT

Notwithstanding, the burning flames on the sword of hades, didn't quench in the rain on reactivation. Even though it is dipped in the middle of a wide ocean, it will still not go off. Anytime it is reactivated and I'm holding to it firmly in my arm, the flames only keeps burning, and does not go off.

Courageously, I began pragmatically warring in the rain, in the middle of the dark sky, and as rain waters pours down on me increasingly. I maneuver the sword of hades on several spinning techniques, cutting techniques, piercing techniques and sword throwing techniques.

ADVERTISEMENT

Running shadow cutting and piercing were combine as I practice harder on deadly and evil dragon elimination. I was cutting and piercing through the tiniest of hails and rain water droplets from the dark sky to ascertain invisibility with the sword of hades.

ADVERTISEMENT

I practice on the best sword defensive techniques in any combat situation. Jumping and defensively handling of the sword armor, leaping and aerial spinning strike. Rolling and dodging on dragon fires. The dragon's tail cutting and defensive strike. Congratulation Frankenstein, a voice rang out of the dark shadows, Your Skill multiplication, resembled. I put a deaf ear to it, because i wanted to finish it up with the dragons. Finally, if the dragon should get any closer to me and opens its mouth to unleash fire on me, then I will first send the sword of hades into its throat for consumption. That might just be the best way towards slaying the dragons but might be very difficult accomplishing, but if chances emerges then it will be taken advantage off.

ADVERTISEMENT

Still the sword of hades is without its sheath, so I buried it to the earth to put out its fire, after a lengthy time of practice session, in the stormy rain.

The more I engage in practice, the more invisible I became in handling of the sword armor.

With more practice, the more experience it gained me.

Those dragons will surely not get by so easily, not with a warrior of my kind I announces..

ADVERTISEMENT

AUTHORS NOTE: WARNING, In corporations with civil laws and other universal laws, no reader is permitted to use any object aforementioned in this novella as a weapon against any living thing, precisely, humans and animals.

To continue reading on this story, ‘I agree’, I am solely responsible for my own actions, including all actions I’ve taken before and will take after reading of this novella, thankss...

NOTE: The novel will be updated daily. Comeback and continue reading from where you stop. Everyone!