Chapter 3 Purpose Unveiling, the creature's special abilities part 2

I'm not gonna hurt you, I said, gently and politely as I trailed the forest, Calling out for anyone or anything that might be alive or existing in this en-strange forest besides the misty mountainous coastline hill.

I felt so inquisitive with every single approach that I successfully made in the thick forest, because I strongly believe that someone just spoke to me, there must be someone or something out here, I said, precisely, a humanoid specie, a bird or maybe an animal with a good vocabulary and can talk.

I kept on moving deep and deeper not knowing I would lost my way, and not be able to see through the path from whence I came.

You know, I was so excited about the voice, the beautiful voice that spoke to me, leaving me with a long distant chase over the voice without even knowing where its actually from.

After a lengthy time or hours of walking, and screaming and calling out for anything that might be in this thick forest, I was so tired and gradually was fainting. Hunger and thirst struck so heavily in me, thereafter my memory reprogrammed the rivers beside the mountains.

That will be just what I needed to quench my thirst and reboot my survival mode, I said to myself. I stop immediately and turned back to go and fetch some water to drink, only to realized that I've lost my path in the long walk into the thick forest.

I hover my face downwards, because I knew I can't go back to the riverside anymore, so I decided I'm going to keep going wherever the paths may lead not knowing what lies ahead of me.

The beautiful voice, keeps recurring to me, "Frankenstein over here" that's all my mind and memory keeps picturing as the only strength that's left in me was about to burn away.....

Weakness, pain and fatigue were felt inside and out of my entire body frame, and terrestrial. I stretch out my hand to hold a tall tree that's standing by my left corner before falling to the ground and there I collapsed.

Being the first Origin of my kind, it appears I have humanoid characteristics, except fear. But I certainly couldn't figure out exactly what I am... After being down and out for hours, maybe days, month or years, everything was still blank, it seems I was in a dream state, far asleep not remembering anything.

I only notice the rays of light on me, transmitting energy into my entire diaphragm, then I revive and crawled away from the shelter of the tree, where I collapsed to a point where I can gain so much exposure to the sunlight and I receive so much of the Sun light into my diaphragm.

After staying longer under the sun, I was completely revived, and energize and stronger. I was able to programmed my body frame, and there I stored so much reserved sun power that can keep me awake for a long period of time.

This is one of the ability that my kind also possesses.
I stood up immediately, and start heading towards the direction of the voice, the beautiful voice that spoke to me, while at the river besides the misty mountain.
