

In Love, Never Say Never Chapter 1008

"Since we left the village. I thought it was a coincidence, but they are still behind us even though I took a longer route," revealed Boris.

"Could it be Ronald's family?" I asked though it wasn't likely. Ronald wasn't someone who'd do this.

Boris shook his head. "I don't think so."

After a pause, he sought my approval. "Should I lose them?"

Shaking my head, I replied, "No need. Let's just take the normal route home and see how long they will follow us."

Amy remained silent on the way home. I texted Cameron to ask about Summer's condition. Her reply stated that Summer was fine after undergoing chemotherapy. As Summer was then sent to the disinfection chamber, Cameron could no longer take care of her.

I wanted to call Ashton, but I was feeling nauseous from the long car ride. Hence, I gave up on the thought.

Finally, we arrived in A City at midnight. Boris brought a sleeping Amy to her bed and left some instructions before leaving.

I walked him to the door, where he glanced around carefully and reminded me. "If anything happens tonight, give me a call at once."

Clearly, he was referring to the van which tailed us back then. I nodded and watched as he left. After making sure all the doors were locked, I went to Amy's room and made sure she was still sound asleep.

Back in my room, I was about to call Ashton when a call came in. It was from Ashton. When I answered the call, his voice rang out. "What happened? Why were you unreachable the whole day?"

"Boris and I went to Amy's hometown. The line was bad there, and I've just reached home. What about you?" I explained as I made my way to the balcony.

"Mm, it's a little tricky. Nothing serious, though. Joseph is in A City. You can contact him if any problem arises. I'll be back as soon as I'm done."

I glanced out of the window before closing it. "I've adopted Amy legally. Ashton, I still want Summer to get that surgery in the open."

Ashton fell silent at the other end of the line. I thought he was mad at me, but he spoke. "Scarlett, have you ever thought about this? What is the difference between you, the child's parents, and Armond?"

We were the same. Amy's parents and Armond were after money, while I had my own goals.

I tried to convince him. "I adopted Amy, so she'll be treated as my own. Her future will be different now. Just like Summer, she will have both the Moore family and Fuller family behind her. She will have a better future with us."

His reply took me by surprise. "Mm, sounds great."

I was startled, but he immediately added, "But did you ask the child what she wants?"

Knitting my brows, I felt rage bubbling up inside me. "Ashton, Summer isn't your flesh and blood, so it's normal for you to disregard her. I know you think I shouldn't hurt an innocent child, but sorry. I'm a selfish person. I brought Summer up, so I can't bear to see her in pain. I need to do this."

After a long silence, he sighed and replied, "Scarlett, Summer has always been my daughter. I too want to save her life, but we need to make sure how our decision will affect the future."

He might be right, but I could only place my hope on Amy for now.

Ashton was against the idea of Amy donating her bone marrow, so we were at odds.

The next day, I woke up from a restful slumber.

My pregnancy probably made me sleepy. When I opened my eyes, I could hear someone talking in the yard.

After I pulled the blinds open, I spotted Amy in her pajamas, her hair uncombed. She was talking to Nora, which was outside the door. I hadn't seen Nora for some time.

I was confused to see her. Shouldn't she be in K City with Armond now? Why is she back here? I greeted her through the windows before changing my clothes to go downstairs.

The door could only be unlocked using my fingerprint, so Nora couldn't come in. She only walked in after I unlocked the door, her hands full of breakfast and fruits.
