

I'm Richer Than My Billionaire Ex-husband Chapter 152

Caleb walked out as if he hadn't seen Emma.

The whole secretary department was shocked, but didn't dare to talk about anything.

Emma was in a wheelchair and Tomas saw her when she followed out.

"I'll take you home." It was clear that Caleb didn't want to see Emma at all at this time.

After a few days of silence, now this is the fuss again.

Emma, "What's going on with her and Chester?"

Emma can't help but ask.

She was shocked to hear that Chester had beaten Caleb because of Alina, but now it's all been confirmed.

"That's not for you to ask." Tomas' tone was more serious.

Having been around Caleb all this time, he could see how Caleb really treated Emma.

Emma, on the other hand, is no slouch either.

The relationship between Caleb and Alina is now so complicated that Tomas doesn't want to say anything about it.

Emma's face changed when she heard Tomas's serious and nonchalant tone.

"Okay then, you can take me back."

Finally, she didn't dwell on the matter, but there was a glint in her eye.

Caleb chased out

When he arrived, there was no sign of Alina and Chester, and they did not answer his call.

His phone, falling to the floor, smashed to pieces.

His eyes were glittering with a vicious and cold look.

It's a mess.

It's a complete mess.

The relationship between him and Alina was already at this point. And now Chester's interfering.

This added to the mess that already existed.

Alina was in Chester's car and hadn't looked back since she got out of AIG.

Obviously, she was completely unaware of what was going on.

Griswald Mountain.

It's the highest hill in Ingford, circling all the way up, "Get off."

The man got out of the car and pulled open the door on her side. Alina looked at Chester blankly, obviously still reeling from the fact that she had been taken away by Chester.

Alina looked at Chester's face and then at his palm, "Chester."

Before she could finish her sentence, the next moment there was warmth in her cold hand, and it was Chester who took it.

In one smooth movement, she was taken out of the car.

The breeze from the top of the mountain is cool, with the scent of nature of grass and leaves, which makes it even more relaxing.

Alina likes the feeling of relaxation.

Moreover, the scent of pine and cypress mixed together in a way that felt familiar to her.

"Remember this place?"

"What?"

Although she had lived in Ingford before, it was the first time she had been here because she didn't like sports very much.

When her parents have offered to take her climbing, she has always turned them down because she hates extreme sports.

Because it's too tiring.

“Don’t you remember?” The man got more serious.

Alina looked at Chester blankly and shook her head, obviously had no memory of the place.

She hasn’t been here, has she?

“Is this the place you said you would bring me to before?” Alina asked.

The man answered, “Forget it, it’s okay.”

Alina was confused when Chester said this.

“Chester, I haven’t been here before.” Alina made it very clear.

Or did Chester have something happen here before?

Chester looked at her.

There was a bitterness in his eyes that had been so serious.

Alina could not understand.

The two looked at each other, and the man reached out and tidied her hair, which was a bit messy.

Alina stepped back.

There is no doubt that she is constantly trying to distance herself from Chester, and her invisible actions added to the bitterness in the man’s eyes.

To anyone, Chester was a cold, bitter, unfeeling man. It was bitterness that no one had ever felt before. Even as a member of Chester’s family never felt it in him.

Alina took a deep breath, but before she could say anything, Chester began, “Do you like it here, Abby?”

Shocked, Alina looked at Chester.

Abby?

She forgot.

She can’t remember exactly where she heard this name or who called her that.

Even her parents and everyone around her called her Alina, or Joslan Hughes, basically.

No one had ever called her 'Abby' before, but why now when she heard Chester call her 'Abby', she actually felt her soul had been shaken.

"Remember this name?" The man's long fingers picked up her chin and gently moved closer, his breath on her cheek.

At that moment, Alina's heart clenched even harder.

She didn't know what was wrong with her.

Why did she suddenly have a feeling of wanting to cry?

She hadn't cried much since three years ago, especially in front of Caleb.

She'd done everything in her power to kill him, and now, in front of Chester, why she actually felt this way.

Why did she want to cry?

Deep inside, it was as if something was trying to break through the confines of her heart, and she struggled to hold on to that feeling.

But in the end, nothing was caught. She scrambled to find some answer in her mind.

In the end, however, nothing was found.

"Chester."

"Still don't remember?" Bitter disappointment flashed across the man's eyes.

Faced with Chester, her heart felt even more shaken.

Finally, the man let go of her, and she seemed to feel more comfortable at that moment.

But, there is still a heavy, suffocating feeling in her heart.

"Want to lie down for a while?"

"What?"
