

I'm Richer Than My Billionaire Ex-husband Chapter 310

"Yeah, don't worry about that, let's wait until after tomorrow's wedding."

Lois said as she hugged Emma, calming her down as much as possible.

Now Lois felt that Alina was really stingy.

How much did she have?

She had even taken away the flat where Emma had lived before, and even those bags and jewellery that Emma had bought with Caleb's money.

When Caleb came back, he saw the way Lois was hugging and coaxing Emma, his eyebrows knitted together.

When in the world did Lois have such an attitude towards Emma?

Obviously, Caleb noticed this difference.

When Lois saw Caleb return, her heart thumped in fear, but her face remained as normal, not letting Caleb see half of it.

"You're back."

"Yes."

Caleb nodded his head.

Looking at the pieces on the floor, he frowned, "Who tore them?"

Obviously, in this instant, both of them heard the displeasure in Caleb's tone, and Emma choked up and said, "I tore them up, what is wrong with that?"

As she said this, she looked aggressively at Caleb.

She had always acted very gentle in front of Caleb.

But she got forced by Alina.

Caleb looked at the pieces on the floor and probably knew what it was that was torn.

Eventually, he walked to the sofa and sat down.

And when Lois saw that Caleb did not mean to help Emma up, she was embarrassed and could only help Emma up.

He lit a cigarette.

Lois wanted to remind him of something, but when she thought of the relationship between her and Emma, she could only swallow the words that were on her lips.

And when Emma looked at the man's cold face, her heart panicked.

Could it be that he was angry because of this?

"Caleb." In the end, Emma spoke apprehensively to break this silence.

Caleb took a fierce drag of his cigarette, straight to the butt.

How annoyed he was in his heart right now.

And no matter how much aggravation Emma had, now that she knew that saying more would only make this man more annoyed.

But when she thought of how arrogant Alina had been to herself just now, she couldn't swallow that anger.

However Caleb's eyes were so cold on her.

She knew that this man showed her a good face, and now hadn't dumped her completely because of that incident two years ago.

But if it was exposed, what else did she have in front of Caleb?

"Caleb." When she spoke again, Emma's tone couldn't help but tremble.

Lois stood to the side, her heart already in her throat.

She looked at Caleb and then at Emma, holding back the worry in her eyes.

Caleb put the cigarette butt into the ashtray, the moment his legs were folded, he elegant but also hostile.

"Our wedding is postponed."

Looking fiercely at Caleb, Lois and Emma had disbelief in their eyes.

Both of their minds were blank.

Tomorrow is the wedding.

Emma has been waiting for this day for a long, long time, and it is important to her.

However, Caleb now actually said it is postponed.

“Why?” For a long time, Emma finally found her voice and looked at Caleb, with tears in her eyes.

That aggravation speaks for itself.

It was over.

It was really going to be over.

Could it be that it was because he still couldn't let go of Alina when it was nearing this point?

This must be the case, that bitch has been stirring up her world all these years.

Now, even if she and Caleb are over, she will still turn her world upside down.

Caleb got up.

Obviously there was nothing more to say on the matter.

“Caleb.” Seeing the man step away, Emma was even madder falling from her wheelchair onto the floor.

“Don't go.”

“.....”

“Tell me why?” Tears clouded her eyes.

Even though she now knew why Caleb had made such a decision, Emma still asked.

Why?

Because she wanted this man to say it to her personally, and even to make this man feel guilty for it.

She didn't want to just postpone the wedding.

She knew very well that once the wedding was really postponed, then it would be really difficult to put the wedding between her and Caleb on the agenda.

In such a situation, how could she be willing to do so?

“Caleb, don’t be so cruel to me, okay?”

Emma choked up and said.

And when Lois looked at Emma in such a mess, she was no longer as cold as before, forcing herself to resist the urge to go forward.

Emma was crying hard.

Caleb, “We’ll see.”

After saying that, without waiting for Emma to say anything, he stepped away.

Until the man disappeared from sight, Emma hadn’t even come back to her senses.

Lois had already stepped forward and embraced her, “Emma.”

“Why? Why did he postpone the wedding?” Emma looked at Lois, her eyes no longer able to conceal the pain of her breakdown.

Lois looked at such a painful Emma, pulled her in her arms.

She sooEmma in a soft voice, “Calm down.”

“Lois, he has no intention of marrying me at all, why did he humiliate me like them?”

The more she thought about it.

Emma became more and more painful.

Now everyone in the city knew that they were getting married to each other.

Those people who looked down on her, although they didn’t look at her as well now, but at least, wouldn’t look down on her as much as before.

Yet now...

“Calm down first, we’ll think of a way.” Lois tried to calm Emma down.

As soon as Emma heard the method, she instantly broke down and exploded into rage, “There is no other way. He’s putting me into oblivion.”
