

《I'm The supreme Fairy King》

Chapter 68: Great News In the Morning

'Damn kid, you can't even recognize a diamond even if you have it in your hand,' the old man laughed before adding, 'seducers excel best at bed matters. Embrace the chance and don't undermine it.'

'Sigh, it's like you tasted them before.'

'Indeed on many occasions,' the old man bragged, 'they are really unforgettable... sigh.'

'Hahaha,' Jim just laughed and his old man laughed with him.

"She agrees," Rili said the moment he returned, "she will seek slaves but she can't promise to provide many Bulltors."

"Good," Jim's eyes shone brightly, "draft a contract stating all these terms. And don't forget to add a part where she will keep my identity safe."

"Alright," Rili then went to silence before he said again, "here, check it out and tell me if you need anything more to be added."

Jim took the parchment and started reading it so slow and careful. He knew he would reveal his identity to her. Despite her guessing already who he was, he didn't want to risk anything because of his negligence.

"It's cool," he left a blood imprint over the parchment before adding, "send the parchment for her to sign and then bring with you papers enough to write down the formulas and the blueprint."

"Alright," Rili took the parchment before disappearing again. Jim knew she signed the contract when a third string appeared around his wrist. "This is getting funnier," he laughed when he saw that string.

"Here you go," Rili appeared and the next instant a pile of papers appeared with a pen. "Write them down and hand them to me to deliver and fulfill your deal."

"Good," Jim then started writing everything his old man described and stated on the papers.

This took roughly six hours of hard work. During this, he received a meal from the hotel where he and Rili ate together.

Rili only absorbed food plates in front of Jim's eyes, making him wonder what he was doing with all these foods. Jim only ate little before returning to his task again.

"Done," he took a deep breath before stretching out his arms, "take these and deliver them to her."

"She might need some time to verify all of these," Rili took the big pile of papers beside Jim.

"No problem for me," Jim said before adding, "make her ready, I have an assignment for her the moment she finishes checking the formulas and the blueprint."

"Assignment?" Rili was surprised by the wording of Jim.

"Sure, didn't she promise to back me up?" he winked and Rili understood his meaning right away.

"I'll inform her with this," he said before vanishing.

This time Rili took a long time to appear again. When he came back, it was already dark outside and Jim had a date with Ashley.

"What took you so long?" Jim asked impatiently.

"Sorry she didn't let me leave before checking everything," Rili sighed before adding, "didn't you notice the string around your wrist had turned into a tattoo?"

Jim was absorbed totally in waiting for him that he neglected this slight change in his wrist. He found the tattoo there with a faint golden light that pulsed from time to time.

"Does this mean it's valid?" he asked.

"Sure, and now you can state your... assignment and I'll just deliver it to her to execute."

"Great," Jim said before hearing knocking on the door. "Tell her to help in the twisex issue and come back tomorrow morning."

"Hahaha, alright," Rili laughed as he understood what was going to happen.

As he vanished Jim moved to open the door to Ashley who came in with a shy look on her face.

She wore a long blue dress with sparkling glitter all over it. "Wow, you look stunning," he said as he closed the door.

"I just bought it today," she said before adding, "I took the money from Rick as a loan."

He went to her, moved a couple of strands away from her bare shoulders before muttering, "I should thank him for doing that."

He softly painted a kiss over her shoulder before feeling the faint tremble of her body. He didn't stop as he ascended all the way to her neck, slightly biting her with his lips.

And she only gasped for a long breath while her body numbed for a moment.

His hands moved, to find the zip in her back and slowly took it down towards her waist. Slowly he started to push the dress down using his mouth with each step, had a soft kiss and a long bite with his lips over her smooth skin.

The moment the dress went down, he held her back with one hand, led her to the bed nearby before leaning over one of the two bulging lumps on her chest and sucked its top into his mouth.

And started squeezing it slowly between his teeth while sucking it deeper inside.

Her soft moan enticed more fire inside him, and the next thing he did was to push her body further on the bed, raise her legs and bury his head in between and started eating everything his lips met.

She was now in another world of dreams, and the long night passed quickly on her while sleeping in his embrace with a body full of red marks and raced breaths as she kept screaming loudly from his touches, biting, and hitting.

And he just laid beside her feeling more satisfied, wondering how Sandy's taste would be.

The next morning he had received good news one after another from Rili.

When he woke up, he found no trace of Ashley beside him. "Sigh, this girl..." he just shook his head before heading to take a shower. "Doesn't she know that morning is much better than night?" he laughed before dressing up to find Rili laying in wait for him in the room.

"Any news?" he asked.

"Great news," Rili answered.

"About Sandy?" Jim went to sit on the sofa where he waited for the answer of Rili.

"About everything," Rili excitedly said, "the other two customers have already confirmed your data. They both did the dealing and delivered to me the tokens," Rili then took out two orbs before adding, "you need to accept them for the deal to be called as done."

"Shouldn't I select one clan grade token from the second seller?" Jim didn't hurry to accept the tokens as he asked with doubt.

"He said he was quite satisfied so he went out of line here and chose the best token he had," Rili said before adding, "he said you'll be greatly satisfied with this one."

Jim sighed and then he decided to accept the two. The moment he took them, the two strings around his wrist vanished in thin air.

"It's done," Rili said before adding, "and the two wants to make more deals with you."

Jim played a little with the orbs in hand before saying, "not now. Let them first be more restless before striking another deal with the two."

He wasn't in a hurry now to make them his backing. He had one strong backing for now, and he didn't need anymore for the time being.

"I have to answer them, what should I tell them?" Rili asked.

"Tell them..." Jim paused before adding, "I'm now busy with other deals so once I'm free I'll contact them again."

"Alright," Rili said but he didn't instantly vanish. "The lady says she will solve the problem of yours in two days maximum," he said and his words made Jim's eyes shine brighter than when he received the tokens in hand.

"And about the slaves, she found some and will send them to the place you desire in less than one hour."

Jim thought before saying, "let them wait for me at the gate of the town in two hours," Jim then paused before adding, "I'll have to ask you to wait there with them."

He then took out a hundred academy coins and left them on the ground as he added, "these are for your hard work so far."

"Oh, thanks so much for your generosity sir," Rili hurried to take the coins from the ground in no time. "I'll wait for you at the gate in two hours."

"Good, see you there," Jim said before watching Rili vanish. "Time to see what you two are about," he evilly smiled while closely observing these two tokens in much interest and curiosity.
