

Journey to Happy Ending Chapter 132

Rain looked at Belinda in appreciation and smiled charmingly. Seeing how much she valued friendship, he realized that he had underestimated her before. He had considered her as a bossy and self-centered girl from a wealthy family. What he saw today was unexpected. He cheered her on in heart, 'Bravo Belinda! I like Daisy too.'

"When did I offend Daisy?" said Mary as she looked at Edward as if to check if he still remembered her existence.

"Didn't you? Then why did she slap you?" responded Belinda, without considering the outcome of what she said.

"No way! Belinda, are you sure you are talking about Daisy?" Rain was surprised that a calm person like Daisy would slap someone.

"So, you two have seen each other," said Edward, sounding irresistible. His handsome face darkened, as he glanced at Mary and Belinda.

Mary had thought that Daisy had disappeared since her wedding night. They had been out of touch with each other, and the private detective failed to find her whereabouts. But now she sensed that wasn't the case. Hearing Edward's words, she looked at the group in panic. Moreover, Edward seemed concerned about her. Mary wondered whether there was something that she didn't know.
