

The Love She Didn't Say by Mona

Chapter 11 It's good to be alive

Elena Forbes on the other end handed the phone to Julia Green, "It was Elizabeth Taylor who told you to call him, right? Spy on him, stupid."

Julia Green was scared by Elena's powerful aura and did not dare to speak, could only stand in awe until Elena left then she patted her chest, "Phew, how scary, but, how did Elena Forbes is here?"

Isn't she always hates this kind of place, even because they often called Alston Rivers to hang out here, Elena couldn't wait to smash this place.

Walking out of the bar Elena Forbes took a deep breath, "Air is better now." She felt the beating of her heart and narrowed her eyes, "It's good to be alive."

At that time, she donated her heart to Alston Rivers and everything blurred around her, thinking that her life was over like this, and couldn't help but feel rueful.

She never thought that she could open her eyes again, just feeling the beating of her heart again, she wasn't sure whether it makes sense.

After she finally calmed down, she saw the time, it was half a month before she once married Alston Rivers.

At this time, she was at a cocktail party, and it was this cocktail party that she made up her mind to marry Alston.

And then, then even if you have him, you still can't his heart, so she lived half of her life blindly and foolishly.

She, Elena Forbes, boasts that she has everything under control, but the heart of Alston

Rivers, she has never been able to control it, how ironic!

Watching the time go by, she directly said goodbye to the organizer of the party and left early, after which there was no news spreading out that she was the only one who could save the day and save the Rivers Group, as she did in the previous life.

Yes, the public opinion in the last life, is manipulated by her, it can be said, in order to marry Alston Rivers as desired, she really did too much, but unfortunately, in the end, all given to others.

Many times, she does not want her to be so scheming, but when her desire becomes an obsession, she couldn't help but be pushed by this desire and finally fall into the abyss.

In this life, she decided to spare herself and Alston Rivers, because she was tired and wanted to stay away from these people.

But God forbid, even if she did not do these things, this time, Alston Rivers actually took the initiative to throw the olive branch to her at the encouragement of others. She did not feel moved, only horrified, this is completely different from what she had in mind, no matter what, they should not have crossed paths whatsoever.

Sooner or later, Alston Rivers will meet his Elizabeth Taylor, will get married and have children with each other, while she, will only become a nobody. This simple thing, she can still see clearly, Alston Rivers' calculation and reluctance deeply hidden in his eyes, and she deeply imprinted this in her mind.

How ironic, it turns out that she does not even need to take the initiative, someone will also lean up toward her?

But since he needs her, why is he still behaving like a superior, so is she, Elena Forbes owed to him?

If have to say who owes who, it should be the Alston Rivers who owes her, since childhood, these fourteen years, she has always been taken care of him, never slack.

Of course, he would feel granted if something is easy to acquire and despised them, she now finally understands.

Thinking of this, Elena laughed self-mockingly, "Now it's different!"

So, she simply refused Alston Rivers, and at that moment, she saw the gloom flashing in his eyes, obviously, she offending him hard.

But since she has decided to stay away from him far away, what does it matter!
