

Life at The Top – Chapter 1475

Greg had been in the domestic mobile phone manufacturing industry for almost half a year and he had figured out a lot of the things in this industry.

One had to know that being able to make the prototype meant that one could formally produce mobile phones, at least requiring one to initially integrate both the upstream and downstream of the supply chain.

Even so, Greg was still not qualified to contact companies like Nawait Semiconductor Manufacturing.

This was because the other party looked down on small manufacturers like him.

Every shipment was calculated in the tens of millions and they would not accept their order if it did not consist of enough stock.

Furthermore, they might not accept Greg's order if the latter did not demonstrate a certain industry strength or market cap even if he were to order tens of millions in parts. If the small factory went bankrupt, this would then affect the brand of Nawait Semiconductor Manufacturing.

Almost all major international brands were arrogant. Meanwhile, Nawait Semiconductor Manufacturing did indeed possess the qualifications of being so arrogant in the domestic semiconductor industry.

It could be said that Greg was not even qualified to sit down to eat and drink tea in front of Todd right now. However, at this moment, Todd was smiling at Greg. Meanwhile, when he looked at Jasper, his eyes were full of respect.

'How many powerful figures does Jasper know that I am unaware of? Is JW's influence already so great?' Greg could not help but think to himself.

Naturally, it was impossible for him to know that JW was no longer what it used to be.

Terizone dominated the internet and communication in the country.

Abbylon started online shopping.

Sena stood up tall in the domestic internet gaming industry.

JW Real Estates was ranked top three in the overall comparisons list consisting of national real estate companies at the end of the year.

JW Electronics became the leader in the field of domestic electronic product manufacturing.

Advent Entertainment Group completely swapped over to the entertainment industry in the mainland market and had become an industry titan.

Today, JW was already a real behemoth that consisted of diversified companies across various industries.

Their products could be as big as a house or as small as an MP3. It also held the contact information of all of your online friends, a piece of clothing you bought on an online shopping platform, or perhaps a new super weapon you created in United Legends.

These things that were closely related to people's livelihood had been quietly laid out around everyone in Somerland.

You might not use KK, but you would likely play games. Perhaps you did not play games, but you would eventually buy something online. Even if you did not shop online, you would definitely buy a house and start a family.

JW started silently manifesting around everyone in the country. This was the closed-loop ecosystem that the top business tycoons of later generations dreamt of achieving.

As far as Todd was concerned, what was more important was the influence that Jasper had.

The guest of the wealthy Law family in Harbor City was always someone cultured and competent. Moreover, he even received news that Jasper had a cooperative relationship with heirs of top families such as the little prince in the mainland.

This was what the Pullers, that Todd represented, desperately needed right now.

The Pullers owned Nawait Semiconductor Manufacturing. Although there were two major shareholders in this company, Flips and the Nawait government, this had become a double-edged sword. Now, the Pullers, who was also the founder and largest private shareholder of Nawait Semiconductor Manufacturing, urgently needed to shed their identity of being the Nawait government's spokesperson and were seeking a real path to break into the upper class.