

Life at The Top – Chapter 1729 - 1731

“138 Beverly Hills Central Road.”

After saying this, the man immediately walked toward downtown Los Angeles without saying anything else.

After taking the ID card, Echo did not even look in the direction in which the man had left. After eyeing his three subordinates, the gang walked straight toward the security door of the villa area.

As soon as he arrived at the door, a team of security guards came out immediately.

Although they were security guards, they were not the same as the security guards in Somerland.

Each of these security guards were discharged veterans from the military, the police force, or secret service agencies. All of them were also armed with live ammunition and were as burly as bears.

To maintain the professional security service of these people, each household of Beverly Hills had to invest no less than 100 thousand US Dollars per year. The price was outrageous, but it also brought the world’s top-level residential security services.

“Please show your ID.”

Two big black men walked up to Echo and said with alertness and vigilance.

Echo took out the ID card he had just obtained and gave it to the black man.

After scanning the ID card with a machine, the big black man glanced at Echo and let them in.

Echo and his three subordinates drove straight in. Along the Central Road of Beverly Hills, they found house number 138. Then, Echo opened the door of the villa with his ID card and walked in.

The four of them went straight to the top floor and Echo finally had an expression on his face.

It was a look of rancor, bitterness, and madness.

He looked at the villa with the curtains closed and the locked door not far away. Then, he said in Sunrish, "Jasper is in there."

"Are we taking action tonight?" One of the subordinates asked.

After shaking his head, Echo said, "The security here is too tight. When we do it, we will definitely be surrounded within three minutes if we are detected, so this is not the best choice. According to the intelligence, Jasper will not stay here for too long. We will wait until tomorrow to see if he comes out. The moment he steps out of the villa, it will be his death."

"But just in case, the four of us take turns staying up tonight. We must not let Jasper escape from right under our noses."

The three subordinates nodded at the same time and replied respectfully, "Roger!"

Jasper was not a god, so naturally, it was impossible for him to know that four people were waiting to kill him in the villa next door. After he and Anna messed around for a while, they cuddled and fell asleep.

By the next day, Jasper did not even get out of bed, let alone go out of the house. Anna was the same.

When they were hungry, they would find something easy to cook. When they were thirsty, there were drinks and mineral water in the refrigerator.

Both of them knew that they were going to part ways soon and that today was also Anna's birthday, so they were just messing around all day in bed. This continued until twilight, when the exciting and heated room fell silent alongside Anna's small gasp. Only the heavy breathing of two people remained in the room as the air filled with the unique smell of man and woman. "I understood something after this whole day and whole night." Jasper took the tissue and handed it to Anna for her to wipe herself. Meanwhile, the floor under the bed was also scattered with similar tissues. "Only men will be affected after long hours of fun, but not the women." "How vulgar!" Anna snorted. After wiping her and Jasper clean, she lay on the bed, blinked at Jasper, and teased, "Are you begging for mercy now?"

Chapter 1730

Jasper snorted and said stubbornly, "Nonsense. How am I begging for mercy? I can go for another 300 rounds." "How stubborn." Anna poked Jasper on the chest and said, "Go and get me a bottle of water." At this moment, Echo's expression was getting more and more unpleasant as the sky was turning dark. There were food scraps that the four of them ate today and some mineral water scattered under their feet. "Damn, is this guy planning to die in there and not come out?" One of the subordinates whispered when he saw Echo cursing, "We can't keep doing this. Do you want to send someone to check it out? You have to at least confirm that Jasper is indeed inside. It's been almost 20 hours since the early morning to now. In the off chance that the intelligence is wrong, we will have been waiting in vain if Jasper is not there.”

Echo’s face was so gloomy that it seemed to be dripping. Although he believed that the information passed by Fabian would not be a problem, Echo was a little perturbed this time when he thought about him just missing Jasper in Finland before.

Just when he was about to let his subordinates go to investigate, there was a sudden movement in the window of the opposite villa.

Echo shuddered violently and looked up carefully, but after he saw the curtain of the opposite villa shake for a while, only half a room corner was exposed.

Then, Echo saw

Jasper’s face that he would never forget even after he died. Jasper was standing by the bed without wearing a shirt.

Before Echo could make out the situation clearly, a pair of fair and supple arms belonging to a woman appeared behind Jasper. Then, they circled Jasper’s neck and pulled him to somewhere behind the curtains. Immediately afterward, the curtains were lowered, and a moment later, they could no longer see the scene inside.

Even though they only saw Jasper’s naked upper body and the fair and tender arms of a woman, anyone could understand what was happening inside.

“That punk!”

Echo was furious. He grabbed a glass and smashed it on the ground.

“We are starving here, but that bastard Jasper was actually fooling around with a woman all day long!”

Recalling the hardships of his journey and the tragedy of squatting around for 24 hours, not eating well, and not sleeping well, Echo wanted to skin Jasper alive.

“What shall we do now?” A subordinate asked, bracing himself.

“We’ll wait!”

Echo's eyes were bloodshot, and he said, "I don't believe that he'll die in there!"

Echo never thought that he had to wait for two whole days.

Two days later, the tightly shut door of the villa finally opened. Jasper and Anna walked out of the villa while looking nicely dressed. They seemed exhausted and weak, as though they had lost a lot of strength.

It was unknown how many times they had fooled around over these three days. In short,

Jasper felt that he was really going to be drained.

They were initially going at it six to seven times a night, but on the final night, they only did it twice before falling asleep.

"He's out!"

A subordinate shouted in excitement and surprise, causing Echo, who had just fallen asleep, to stand up.

At this moment, all four of them had dark circles under their eyes and looked off colored.

They looked similar to Jasper, but the actual situation was completely different.

To put it simply, Jasper looked like that because he had too much fun, but they looked like that because they were suffering.

"He's out! He's finally out!"

Echo was so touched that he almost shouted, "God bless Sunrise Land."

Chapter 1731

God knows what they experienced over the past few days.

From the initial anger to the numbness right now, Echo almost could not stop himself from barging in and killing Jasper on the spot regardless of the consequences on multiple occasions.

However, he managed to hold out until Jasper came out.

“Get ready. Once Jasper leaves the villa area, immediately find a suitable place to take action. We have only one chance, so we must succeed.”

At this moment, Jasper and Anna were waiting for the car at the entrance of the villa.

“Let me take you to the airport.” Anna looked at Jasper and said softly.

“No, I’ll just go by myself. You should take good care of yourself over here,” Jasper said.

Anna chuckled and said, “Don’t make it as though it is a matter of life and death. I’m flying to Paris in two days, and I will return to Somerland after attending the fashion week.”

While they were speaking, the car that came to pick up Jasper drove over.

“Alright, I’m leaving.” Jasper looked at Anna and said.

Anna’s gaze was as soft as water. She nodded lightly, hesitated, and then said, “Give me a call if you’re in any trouble.”

“What troubles could I be in?”

Jasper laughed.

Anna and the Laws had helped him many times throughout his rise, so they could be described as his savior. Yet, right now, his problem could not be solved by the Laws and he no longer needed help from others. He would need to solve his own problems at the end of the day.

He did not want to add another burden to the Laws because of him.

Especially since the old master was getting older and according to his memories before his reincarnation, the old master would pass away in two more years.

When he thought about this, Jasper said, “If you have time, tell your grandpa to do more checkups. Don’t trouble him with trivial problems. After all, he’s old and he can’t go through all of that.”

Anna rolled her eyes at Jasper and said, "That's my grandpa. Do you think I don't know this? However, you're thoughtful for saying that."
"Alright, I'm going. I'll head to Harbor City after you go back and then we'll go visit the old master together," Jasper said.
Anna froze for a moment and said, "Are you going to tell Grandpa about us?"
"Can we hide our affairs from others? We have to face it sooner or later. The old master is the person I respect the most and you are his treasure. I can't justify not telling him about this."
Jasper's words made Anna purse her lips. She had made countless children of the elites in Harbor City worship her with her brilliant mind, but now, she was a little flustered and nervous.
"Yes, but I'm a little scared."
Anna showed her soft side for the first time.
"It's okay. I'll be right there."

Jasper squeezed Anna's hand and said softly, "Do you think I'll let you stay by me with such an obscure identity?"
"Who said I wanted to stay with you?" Anna huffed softly.
"Haha, it's not you who has the final say now. I asked you before and now we have done all the things that should be done and the things that should not be done, so you can't regret now."
After Jasper said that, he turned around and got into the car. He continued, "Go on, you should head home. I'm going to the airport."
Anna nodded. After Jasper's car turned around, she got into the car behind him.

Anna watched as Jasper's car drove out of the villa area and headed to the airport with mixed feelings.

Meanwhile, her car was driving toward downtown Los Angeles.

When Anna and Jasper's car parted ways, a low-profile black Cadillac emerged from the next lane and followed Jasper's car.