

A Lifetime Love

A Lifetime Love

Chapter 26

No one could understand what Denver was thinking, not even himself.

He did not know why, but he had been agitated ever since he met the woman.

Around five in the evening, Denver went to his own bar, and Devin showed up with an envelope in his hand.

“Mr. Salisbury, these are all I got. Please have a look.”

Denver, who was smoking a cigarette, took out a pile of cash that consisted of around fifty thousand

“Mr. Salisbury, you don’t need to pay me for such a favor.”

“Take it. You have a lot of subordinates too. Take care of them.”

Upon hearing that, Devin smiled and accepted the money.

Without wasting another second, Denver opened up the envelope.

There were only three photos inside.

The first one was when Seraphina was around five years old.

Even though she was still a kid, her beauty was already evident.

Her skin was utterly fair, and she had dimples on her cheek while she smiled.

It was a photo with Martha, and Seraphina was wearing an elegant white dress, her hair tied into two ponytails.

Denver’s heart almost melted upon seeing that, even though he usually disliked kids.

The following picture was taken when she was about twelve years old.

It was when Martha accompanied her to participate in a piano contest.

Even though it only showed the side of her face, her beauty still amazed Denver.

The last photo was the one taken at the wedding.

In the picture, she had her veil lifted as she took the initiative to kiss Lucien.

Even though the picture was a bit blurry, Denver could recognize that it was her.

Denver's heart dropped upon seeing that particular photo, and in the next second, he tore it into pieces.

"Only these three?" Denver questioned, turning toward Devin.

"Vs Mr Salisbury. I spent a lot of effort to get these. Ms. Seraphina's life has been off the radar all this while. She didn't even go to school, and she had no friends. She didn't even have a neighbor living on Mount Malachite. Plus, we were unable to reach anyone that served her..."

"All right. I got it. You may leave now."

"Okay. Please call me again if there's anything you need."

After Devin left, Denver took out the documents in the envelope and started reading.

The more he read, the more impressed he was.

Even though Seraphina had never been to school, she had obtained countless skills and knowledge,

It turned out that Martha had spent a lot of money to hire a home tutor for her.

She was fluent in six languages and was an expert in four kinds of musical instruments.

Besides, she knew how to play golf and archery as well.

The most surprising thing about her was that she even got a racing license was

What kind of goddess is this? Is she even human? She has never been to school, but she knows more than anybody.

At that instant, Denver regretted deeply for not investigating thoroughly before the wedding. Instead, he believed all the unfounded rumors that came to his ears.

Even when he found out the truth now, it was too late.

With that in mind, he got extremely frustrated.

Stubbing out the cigarette, he got to his feet and left in exasperation.

He intended to go back home, but as soon as he walked out of the bar, he was blocked by Joey.

Joey was the infamous celebrity that appeared in the video that was played at his wedding.

“Denver, why are you avoiding me these few days?” Joey coaxed as she leaned toward Denver.
