A Lifetime Love

Chapter 28

Jacob scolded wrathfully right after that, "What nonsense are you talking about? You useless p*nk!"

Keeping a straight face, Denver responded, "Dad, it's not nonsense. I mean it."

Penelope could no longer sit still as she immediately stood up and pulled Denver upstairs.

She did not want to get embarrassed in front of the relative.

When they were upstairs, Penelope lowered her voice and asked, "What are you up to, Denver?"

Denver leaned against the wall, lighting up a cigarette in his hand.

"Mom, I regretted it. You guys were the ones who arranged for Seraphina to be my wife. Now I want her back."

Upon hearing that, Penelope displayed an expression of mixed feelings. "Don't ever mention this again to your dad, or you'll get beaten again. Don't you know why you got beaten up that day? We had arranged the wedding for you and even picked a good date. The bride was already ready as well. Yet you hooked up with a minor celebrity and embarrassed the whole family in front of everyone. We were so ashamed that we didn't even dare to get back the ten million deposit we gave the Hoult family. Fortunately, they were still reasonable, and they gave us back the money without any complaint. Even so, they were surely displeased by this."

Penelope had always been a wise and honest person.

She had two sons and a daughter. Duncan, the eldest son, was a mature and considerate man, while Deborah, her daughter, was still studying in Caspardion.

Denver was the only child that she could not stop worrying about. Hence, she figured she should find him a good wife.

Little did she know things would end up worse. Fortunately, the Riviere family was willing to clear up the mess for them.

Otherwise, the Hoult family would not let them off the hook that easily.

Now that the scandal was finally able to ease for a little, Denver came telling them he wanted Seraphina back. In other words, he was inviting more trouble.

Nonetheless, Penelope indeed had a good temper. If it were Jacob, he would undoubtedly have slapped Denver in his face.

However, Denver showed no repentance, still insisting on his thoughts.

“Mom, I’m not asking for your help. The way you guys do things is out of date. I will handle my own stuff. I’m merely giving you a heads up about it so you and Dad won’t get shocked when I bring Seraphina back with me.”

Finally, Penelope lost her calm. “Denver, what the hell are you talking about? She has already married into the Riviere family. Is it not enough to offend the Hoult family? Do you seriously want to offend the Riviere family as well? Your dad will kill you if he finds out.”

“All right. That’s enough. I know what to do.”

Denver ended the conversation abruptly and turned to leave, his face dark.

“Denver, listen to me. Don’t act rashly.”

Penelope gave her last reminder before Denver left, but it all fell on deaf ears.

The first thing that Denver wanted to do right now was to talk to Seraphina alone.

After all, he could not do much today as Lucien was present. He thought the outcome might be different if he got the chance to talk to Seraphina alone.

As such, he dialed Seraphina’s number directly.

The call got through for a long while, but no one answered it.

With that, he tried to reach the number through WhatsApp.

He discovered Seraphina’s WhatsApp name was With You Forever, while its profile photo was a typical picture of grass.

Feeling somewhat excited, Denver sent Seraphina a message confidently, informing her of his number.

However, there was still no response from Seraphina even after half an hour had passed.

Denver began running out of patience. What's going on? Does she even check her phone?

On the other side, Seraphina was listening to music. She noticed the message sent by Denver, but she had no intention to respond to it.
