

Let me go, Mr. Hill By Shallow South Chapter 1923

That was Rodney's first time seeing Sarah this way. Maybe this was Sarah's true self.

Late into the night.

When Freya heard the sound of the door opening downstairs, she glanced at her phone. It was already 2:00 a.m.

Rodney had stayed in that condominium until 2:00 a.m.

Ha.

Freya closed her eyes and pretended to be asleep.

20 minutes later, Rodney lay down beside her lightly.

Freya noticed that Rodney was having trouble falling asleep.

He kept tossing and turning.

Although he did it lightly, she still noticed it because she could not sleep too.

She thought about many things in her head.

The night had never felt so long before.

In the morning, she acted as if she was waking up from her sleep.

Rodney got up too. His eyes were red. "Wifey, I'm sorry. I had some urgent matters yesterday. Was the movie... nice?"

"Have you taken care of the problem?" Freya asked calmly,

"What happened to the company?"

"Oh, a fire broke out at a small company that I invested in previously." Rodney had already thought of an excuse.

"Really? Where is it?"

"In the north of the city." Rodney was afraid that she would keep asking. He quickly yawned. "I'm going to sleep a little more."

He did not know how complicated and full of disappointment Freya's gaze was when he turned to his side.

She thought she was already numb. However, she still found it ridiculous every time Rodney lied.

He could even lie about fires now?

Freya had the urge to drag him off the bed and expose his lies to make him feel humiliated and embarrassed. Then, she would shed all pretenses and divorce him.

However, she could not do that. They still had a child together.

Freya could not alarm him. What if he let Sarah escape beforehand?

As Freya changed her clothes, she looked at herself in the mirror. She recalled how reckless she used to be in the past. She did everything solely based on her passion. That was because her parents and her brother had pampered her ever since she was young. After leaving her family and entering society, she had experienced harsh lessons one after another. She did not understand what she was lacking. Maybe someone like her should not have put too much importance on relationships. While Rodney was still sleeping at home, Freya drove the car and went out.

On the way, she gave Catherine a call. "Go to a place with me. I'll pick you up in half an hour."

When the car arrived at the Hill family's manor, Catherine quickly got in. She was stunned when she saw Freya's bloodshot eyes. "Did you not get any sleep last night? You want me to go somewhere with you. Could it be Rodney— " "He stayed at this location until 2:00 a.m. last night. I've already searched it up. It's a condominium." Freya tossed her phone to Catherine. "He told me that a fire occurred at one of the companies he invested in. He immediately left me alone in the cinema and went over. I'm not too sure whether Sarah is hiding there or not, but we can go over to have a look."

"Okay. Let's go and have a look. If it's not Sarah, at least we wouldn't have caused unnecessary alarm." Catherine glanced at Freya worriedly as she spoke, "Look at the state you're in. Let me drive. You can take a rest."

"I won't be able to fall asleep even if I rest. I'll think about nonsensical things instead." Freya started the car.

Upon hearing that, Catherine could not say anything else. It required about an hour to get to that place.

Within that hour, Catherine had already contacted Elle of Liona. Elle investigated the matter quickly. "The condominium was built by Glory Properties three years ago. There are three shareholders in Glory Properties, Frankie Hayes, Zac Lawrence, and Rory Wooten."

"Rory Wooten?" Freya frowned. "I think I've heard of that name before. Oh, some time back... Rodney said he was going to a meal to celebrate his friend's birthday. That friend's name is Rory Wooten."

After she spoke, her heart felt even colder. "Could Rodney be using his friend's house as a cover to hide a woman?"

Catherine did not reply to Freya. She asked Elle, "When you were searching for Sarah before, have you checked this area?"

Elle hesitated for a moment and said, "That's an expensive neighborhood. Many of the owners are Canberra's noblemen who are using the houses as an investment. When we were conducting our investigation, the management of the neighborhood said the residents were complaining. Afterward, Snowden's members came and said they were familiar with that area. Therefore, we handed that area to Snowden's men. They said there were no signs of Sarah there."

She added after pausing for a moment, "Moreover, we didn't think Sarah would be staying there back then. After all, a social security card is required for registration. Therefore, we prioritized older houses more."

Catherine understood.

She had asked Shaun about it before. She had her suspicions when she heard that Rodney had become the person in charge of Snowden.

She did not expect that her suspicions were about to become real.

"Elle, bring some people over and wait secretly near the condominium. Don't tell Shaun about this for now, and don't let Snowden's people find out too. Also, investigate which units belong to Rory Wooten."

After Catherine hung up the call, Freya's face had gotten paler.

"Is Sarah really inside?"

"There's a 50 percent chance." Catherine nodded. "Your tracker only detected that Rodney was in this condominium last night. It couldn't detect the exact unit number. We'll have to investigate it."

Freya nodded. She was still confused and at a loss.

She could not understand why Rodney was hiding Sarah. Did he love her that much?

When Catherine and Freya arrived below the condominium, Elle had found out the units under Rory's name. However, the entire 19th and 20th floors were his.

Luckily, Liona had hackers. They quickly hacked into the management's system and checked the information of the residents who lived on those two floors.

"Miss Jones, the hackers have found out Rory's utility bills and rental information. After filtering, the earliest time when some units were rented out was three years ago, while the latest was two months ago. Only three units under his name are empty. However, there's a unit numbered 1go8 that isn't rented out, yet water and electricity are being used every day."

"When did that situation start?" "Half a month ago."

"Okay. I got it."

Catherine nodded.

The call was on speakerphone, and Freya was already deep in thought.

After a moment, she took out her phone and checked something. "It was two days before Rodney went on a business trip to Cairns. He even lied to me when he came back from Cairns. I didn't know where he went for that whole evening and night. His clothes were different when he returned too."

Freya could more or less guess it. It turned out that Rodney was at this place.

Anger flashed across Catherine's eyes too. What did Rodney take Freya for?

"Do we go up like this?"

Freya had come around and calmed down. "Rodney's men may be hiding near the condominium. If we alarm them, will he arrange for Sarah to leave?"
