

Let Me Go, Mr. Hill!

Chapter 2947

Chapter 2947

It was obvious that Levi was born in October, so why was there nothing like her mother?

Charity was a little depressed.

“I’m saying, let Levi grow up quickly and be a flower girl for us.” Chester said the truth with a particularly brazen heart.

“What you think is really beautiful.” Charity folded her chest and looked at Chester with a smile. “The dream is also very naive.”

“Why is it a dream, Charity? I have been thinking very long-term, a wedding is necessary; I can’t deny it to you, your good friends Catherine and Freya are getting married, don’t you envy them at all?” Chester asked.

“What is there to be envious of?” Charity said, “The wedding is so troublesome. You have to invite guests, hold a banquet, rehearse on the day of the wedding, and swear to love you for the rest of your life in front of your relatives and friends. I don’t know how many times I’ve acted as a bride getting married, no matter if it’s ancient or modern; maybe twice or three times, I’ve vomited the oath.”

Chester: “...”

He's even forgotten. Charity appeared on a television show. In the TV series, the reunion of the hero and heroine ended with a wedding.

"How can you say that? The groom is not me; it's different." Chester bit the bullet and said, "When we get married, you don't have to prepare anything; I will take care of everything. As long as you show up in person, it's OK."

Charity snorted softly, "Which marriage doesn't get up before dawn and start putting on makeup?" It takes a long time to put on makeup on the head and face. It's boring. People's lives are, in fact, simple. Don't tire yourself. Think about it yourself. It doesn't mean that after the wedding, we can grow old together if you swear an oath before God; anyway, I'm not interested in weddings."

After Charity finished speaking, she glanced at Chester and said, "You may not understand my thoughts. To put it bluntly, I have died once, and I have tasted the taste of death. In this life, I don't want to accommodate anyone. If I want a wedding, I will say so one day. If I don't want it, it's useless for you to break my ears."

"Okay, I understand. I won't force you." Chester was a little disappointed, but he also told himself to be content.

"Charity, would you consider getting a certificate with me?"

“No, have we dated? How long? I still have a lot of places to investigate.” Charity spoke honestly.

“Okay, take your time to investigate.” Chester pulled her to his side and said, “This time you will be the bridesmaid and I will be the best man; when the time comes, we will have a good vacation in the Maldives and have fun; shall we bring Levi together?”

Charity: “Hmm.”

...

After a month and a half, Chester boarded Shaun’s private jet with Charity, Mrs. Robbins, and Levi.

It took more than 10 hours to fly to the Maldives.

On the plane, apart from Catheine and Freya, there were also two pairs of relatives and friends of the bride and groom, totaling dozens of people.

After take-off, a group of women sat together, a group of men sat together, and the children next to each other gathered together to laugh and play.

In the political and business circles in Canberra, there were only a few familiar faces.

Many people hadn’t seen Chester for a while, especially Chase Harrison, who hasn’t been to the capital for a long time.

Chase Harrison wanted to ask Chester to play cards, but he couldn’t find Chester on the plane after searching for a long time.

Chase: “Mr. Hill, where is Chester? Did he not get on the plane?”

Shaun pointed to a figure by the window with his chin and asked, “Where is he?”

□ □ □