Chase followed his gaze and looked over.

By the window, a man in blue casual clothes was sitting there, holding a baby in his hand, with a baby backpack on his other arm and a feeding bottle in his hand, coaxing the baby to breastfeed.

Chase was taken aback, thinking he had been dazzled for a while.

He felt even more blind when the man raised his face and the corners of his mouth were deep into a smile on his handsome face.

This was Chester, who was cold and arrogant and had a more eccentric temper than Shaun.

“It’s shocking.” Shaun mockingly complained, “I always thought that I was enough to be a dad, but now I find that compared with Chester, I am compared to a sc*m.”

Chase nodded in agreement, “Hey, you said that this Chester could not have been humiliated by Eliza, right?”

Shaun didn’t say anything; he wouldn’t dare say that Eliza was reborn by Charity; if such a heinous thing got out, Eliza would be too troublesome to be arrested for research.

He could, however, also understand Chase's viewpoints, just as he had initially questioned Chester's bewitching by Eliza.

If it was Charity, he would understand.

After all, Charity was Chester's first love.

Chase walked over to say hello to Chester and said,

"Chester, you think you care too much about this woman; even a child who has nothing to do with you is as precious as a pearl. I almost don't know that woman. You are indifferent."

As soon as he finished speaking, he was met with a cold, knife-like look from Chester.

Chase's grievance, "Look at you, with your indifference and ruthlessness. I thought everyone would fall in love, but you wouldn't.

I haven't even found a girlfriend to get married and have children yet, but you're even worse than me. One step ahead."

"Sorry, I'm two steps ahead of you." Chester laughed.

"What two steps, you're not going to... hide evidence?"

Chase was startled.

Chester didn't bother to talk to him.

Chase glanced at the child inexplicably, it didn't matter if it didn't. After looking at the child, he couldn't help but look at Chester again, and took a soft breath, "This child, why does he look like your child?" Didn't you say that this is the child that Eliza raised abroad? it can't be yours..."

Chester hurriedly glared at Chase warningly.

“I can’t really guess right.” Seeing his expression, Chase knew that he might have guessed right.

“This child... really looks like me?” Chester was a little puzzled, and Shaun also said that the child resembled him; why didn’t he see it at all?

“My God, you’re not blind, are you? These eyebrows and facial features look like 50%, and I guess they’ll be 100% when you open them.”

Chester was in a bad mood when he heard that. He doesn’t want kids like him.

He and Charity had only gotten back together not long ago, if Charity found out, she might feel that he was cheating on her, and when the time came, she wouldn’t be able to afford it, and might break up.

Chase made a “tsk” sound, with an envious expression on his face, and said, “You said you are too lucky. You don’t have to work hard to be a happy father, and Shaun is the same. “And a good, considerate man like me has not left the single until now; the God has no eyes.”

“Who are you calling sc*m like a ghost?” Shaun was gloomy.

The voice came from behind Chase. He turned his head and took two steps back in fright, then ran towards Catherine.

“Catherine, help me.”
