

MADAM'S IDENTITIES SHOCKS THE ENTIRE CITY AGAIN Chapter 1037

On the 38th floor of Jin Chen Hotel.

A group of old pedants was arguing fiercely.

“Country Z has never successfully researched and produced a chip before. This time, they suddenly came up with a chip. It’s obvious that they have stolen our research results.”

The representative of Hengfeng Corporation was very firm.

Another blonde scholar clearly didn’t agree with him and stood up to refute, “Chairman Qi, anyone can study chip technology. Your team isn’t the only one who has the right to study or produce chips. I think your words are biased.”

Qi Rongguang forced a smile. Under the suit and leather shoes, his style was extremely ostentatious and domineering. No matter what the people from the council said, he still tugged at his collar and said the same thing.

“Commissar, I agree with you. But...”

His tone changed. “It’s not that easy to develop the chip technology. We’ve invested a lot of manpower and financial resources and gathered high-end talents worldwide. It took eight years to solve the technical problem. How could a scientific research team from their school possibly develop it? Besides, the chip they provided this time is almost identical to ours. Who would believe that there’s nothing fishy about it? What they’re doing is academic theft.”

The people from the council frowned.

This overseas chip academic exchange was established by the IT Association.

The original intent was to gather the elites of the world for top-notch academic exchanges, especially for the world’s most cutting-edge IT technology.

Unexpectedly, the chip technology provided by Hengfeng Corporation, which represented overseas talents, was almost the same as that provided by a research team at Qing University.

Hengfeng Corporation insisted that the Qing University team had stolen their research results and asked the council to remove the Qing University research team from the IT world. In addition, they were not allowed to use the latest chip.

What was the difference between this and being banned?!

The blond scholar who had just objected to the council frowned fiercely. He was very unhappy with the other party’s tough attitude.

He wanted to retort a few times, but when he saw the young man sitting on the couch not far away, he forcefully swallowed the anger in his chest.

Actually, their association was not afraid of the Hengfeng Corporation, nor were they afraid of Qi Rongguang's threat. It was mainly because the Red Alliance had also interfered this time. From the looks of it, the Red Alliance was on Hengfeng Corporation's side.

They were still in the illegal zone.

And the local tyrant was not to be trifled with.

Furthermore, the Red Alliance had the top technology in the IT field.

Any one of the Red Alliance's items could shake the IT world.

For example, the Lizard Tail virus that Sun created a few years ago had not been cracked for a few years. It had only been cracked half a year ago.

However, he was unwilling to compromise just like that. Without any evidence, he wouldn't allow China to use the new chip technology that had been researched according to Hengfeng Corporation's instructions.

This violated the original intention of their association's academic exchange!

The people in the conference room were noisy.

A young man was sitting on the couch with his legs stretched out and resting on the table. He was dressed in a motorcycle leather jacket and a black T-shirt. There was a silver skull pendant hanging around his neck.

His attire was unique among the group of academic researchers in suits.

However, he still straightened his back arrogantly and grabbed a handful of melon seeds on the table. He looked like he was watching a good show. His eyelids drooped as he ate melon seeds and played with his phone.

No one dared to stand up and criticize him for his frivolous behavior.

Because he did not represent a single person. He represented an organization—the Red Alliance!
