

MADAM'S IDENTITIES SHOCKS THE ENTIRE CITY AGAIN Chapter 1395

After replying, Qiao Nian leaned against the backseat and closed her eyes to rest.

Liang Conglin and Du Mingwei, who were in front, saw through the rearview mirror that the girl had lowered her baseball cap. She had earphones on and her hand was on her chest. She seemed to be asleep.

They looked at each other and naturally lowered their voices. They tried to talk as quietly as possible as they talked on their phones.

Half an hour later.

They arrived at the Intercontinental Hotel and checked in.

The weather in Rao City was better than in Beijing. The sandstorm in Beijing was strong, and the weather in September was exceptionally hot.

In contrast, the weather in Rao City was much milder.

It was close to noon, and the sun was bright but not excessively hot.

Liang Conglin went to settle the check-in procedures while Qiao Nian and Du Mingwei waited for him in the lobby.

Qiao Nian had a strong aura, and there was a cast on her right wrist. Her eyes were also very eye-catching.

She herself didn't care. She was looking down at her phone.

Du Mingwei craned his neck to take a look at what she was playing. It seemed to be a small game. Qiao Nian's right hand was hanging there, and she was playing quite well with her left hand.

He saw the girl pass three rounds in a row within a few minutes of watching.

The clearing was as fast as chopping vegetables.

"What game is this?" Du Mingwei tilted his head and looked at it for a long time, but he couldn't figure out what game she was playing. There didn't seem to be such a game on the market. He couldn't help but ask, "Why haven't I seen this game before? It looks pretty good. It seems to be a Tower Defense game?"

Qiao Nian raised her head slightly. Her raven-black eyelashes were thick and long. She trembled for a moment and paused the game. "Yes," she said to him. "It's a Tower Defense game."

Du Mingwei saw that he had guessed correctly and smiled. "It looks like a Tower Defense game to me."

He paused for a moment before asking curiously, "What's the name of this game? It looks pretty good to me. I'll download it for my daughter another day."

His daughter was the same age as Qiao Nian. She also liked to play games.

He couldn't figure out that game and didn't really approve of his daughter playing it.

He had just seen Qiao Nian's little game. It was very logical and interesting. He could download it for his daughter. In the process of playing the game, he could also nurture her logical thinking.

Qiao Nian lowered her eyes and put away her phone. Instead of answering him directly, she said, "I'll send you a link when I get back."

"Send a link?" Du Mingwei was quite surprised.

He wanted to ask her the name in the app store, but he didn't say anything. Instead, he thanked her. "Thank you."

Qiao Nian nodded, her gaze deep and steady. "No problem."

She wasn't a talkative person, and neither was Du Mingwei. After he finished talking about the game, there was nothing else to talk about.

Feeling a little awkward, he looked up and saw a few people coming in from outside.

Du Mingwei perked up and immediately elbowed Qiao Nian. He gestured with his chin for her to take a look and said in a low voice, "Did you see the men coming in?"

Qiao Nian followed his gaze. Her dark eyes were as dark and deep as the stars in the night sky as she only glanced at them indifferently. Seeing the person in the lead, she retracted her gaze. Her left hand was in her pocket, and under the brim of her cap, her exquisite and eye-catching face was relaxed. "Ah, I see him."

"The guy who's about six feet ahead. He's the contestant from Country D, Aiden."
