

Madam Winters 231

Chapter 231 The sky turned dark. Dew was lying on a hotel bed and feeling very conflicted. She never wanted this to happen today, but things just developed naturally. If Duke found out, how could she still be Mrs. Winters? A bare arm reached out to her from the side. "What are you thinking about?"

Dew pursed her lips. "You can't tell anyone what happened today. Only you and I should know." There was a glint in Dylan's eyes. "Okay, I'll do whatever you say."

Dew sighed in relief.

Luckily, this man was sensible, or else, she would have to persuade him.

Buzz!

Someone's phone vibrated. Dylan immediately picked up his phone. He peeked at the incoming call, and his expression changed. "I'll answer it."

He rushed into the restroom, naked. He even locked the door.

Dew narrowed her eyes.

What call did he have to answer behind her?

As she pondered it, her phone vibrated. She took it from underneath the pillow and glanced at the screen. It was a call from an unfamiliar number.

She thought about not answering at first, but she had nothing else to do, so she just pressed the answer button.

"I never thought I'd still be able to contact you through this number after five years, Ms. Dew Daugherty. It looks like you're a loyal person." Dew was instantly taken aback. Why did this voice sound so familiar?

She massaged her forehead as she tried very hard to think of the owner of this voice.

She did not respond for a long time, so the caller could not help but remind her, "Grand Emperor Hotel, five years ago. Have you forgotten, Ms. Daugherty?" "Are you Mr. Tyson Osborne?" Dew seemed completely startled. Five years ago, Mr. Osborne had traveled to Sea City for a business trip, which happened to be a collaboration with Daugherty Corporation. That day, her mother and Mr. Osborne had attended a banquet, and Adina had coincidentally gone to deliver something to her mother. As such, Mr. Osborne managed to meet Adina. Her mother told her that Tyson was interested in Adina. Therefore, the two of them planned a perfect setup. That night when Adina turned eighteen, they sent Adina to Tyson's bed. However, Dew had yet to figure out how Adina ended up giving birth to Duke's children instead. "I asked you where the girl was, and you said that she was dead," Tyson said coldly. "But I met her tonight. She's still as gorgeous as she was five years ago. Ms. Daugherty, I can give you whatever you want, but you have to deliver that girl to me again." Dew's gaze was profound. Adina was no one five years ago, so it was a piece of cake for her to do anything to Adina back then.

That b*tch, Adina, was not easy to deal with now. It would be harder to send Adina to Tyson than go to Mars. She bit her bottom lip before she slowly said, "Mr. Osborne, I wonder if I should tell you something." She paused for a while before she resumed. "The girl who slept with you five years ago is my biological sister. Her name is Adina. She went missing for four years, and we thought she was dead. But she came back alive not long ago with two kids. All of a sudden, I feel like her kids look pretty similar to you. Perhaps... they're your kids." "Are you serious?" "Of course I am. Why would I lie to you?" Dew smiled faintly. "Mr. Osborne, please wait patiently for a few days. I'll find more information on the kids before I send anything to you. You can search for the kids yourself." "I'll return to Central City in three days. You better have an answer for me by then." Dew happily agreed. She did not know who the biological father of those two little b*stards was. But that would not stop her from planting it on Tyson. The Osborne family fell within Central City's powerful circle, and they were a big family with a huge business. They would not allow their own children to stray. If Tyson insisted on getting the children back from Adina, she would be in trouble for some time. In that case, Adina would not be involved with Duke anymore.
