My Dreamy Old Husband Chapter 808

Michael was probably right. If they traced back, they were on this farm during that time, so this was most probably where Sophia had conceived Carmen.

Flustered, Sophia bit her lip as her face turned red, not knowing what to say.

They wandered around the farm the entire afternoon. It was the first time they had spent time alone for so long.

As she listened to Michael talk about the things they used to do, Sophia felt a sense of warmth in her heart.

On the other hand, Carmen was dragging Cooper to see the pigs.

There were pigs of all sizes in the pen, all fed with a mixture of grass and grains that were grown on the farm.

Leaning on the fence, Carmen chirped, "Let's count the piggies, Grandpa."

Cooper counted it all with just a glance. "There are seven big ones and eight smaller ones."

Pointing at the pigs, Carmen counted them one by one slowly. "You're wrong, Grandpa. There are only four big piggies and six small piggies."

Skeptical, Cooper pointed at the pigs. "Look—there are seven big piggies, four hairless piggies and three with long fur."

"Grandpa, you're mistaken." Carmen giggled. "The long fur ones are doggies!"

As soon as she said that, the three long-furred 'pigs' came running wildly toward Cooper. They were completely covered in dirt, to the point of being unrecognizable.

It turned out to be the three dogs that they brought along!

After rolling around in the pen, they were filthy!

Frightened, Cooper took a couple steps back. Filled with enthusiasm, one of the dogs leaped over the fence and charged at him. Another dog stuck its tongue out, while the other shook off the dirt from its fur.

The dirt-covered dog was shaking off the dirt right before Cooper!

Carmen was so horrified that she screeched. Cooper, on the other hand, subconsciously held onto Carmen and shut his eyes while dirt sprayed all over him.

When the dog was done, she was still clean; not a single spot landed on her. However, poor Cooper was covered in smelly mud and dirt.

Pinching her nose, Carmen muttered, "Grandpa, you're smelly."

Looking at his dirt-covered body, Cooper almost fainted from the smell.

When Carmen had screamed earlier, Linus rushed over and witnessed this hilarious incident.

No one would expect the high and mighty Fass Michel to have an embarrassing moment like this.

Holding back his laughter, Linus chased away the dogs and picked Carmen up. He then turned toward a scowling Cooper and commented, "Why don't you go and get yourself cleaned up?"

Without saying a word, Cooper went back to take a shower. He glowered while Carmen giggled happily.

By the time Cooper came out of the shower, it was late afternoon. He did not bother to dry his hair and went straight to look for Sophia.

Coincidentally, Michael was leading the horse and Sophia back. She looked like she had fun, her cheeks flushed while she giggled non-stop.

In the evening, they prepared pork and chicken and made a delicious dinner.

Sophia had picked a lot of strawberries and grapes. At night, she watched TV while eating the freshly picked fruits. Meanwhile, Linus, Michael, and the people at the farm spent hours cleaning the dogs.

Except for the well-behaved Corrado, the other dogs were filthy.

When it was time to go to bed, Carmen wanted to sleep next to Sophia. She must have used up all her energy at the farm as she fell asleep almost instantly in Sophia's arms.

Gently pushing the door open, Michael saw Carmen sleeping soundly.

In a hushed voice, he whispered, "She fell asleep pretty early, huh?"

Sophia also kept her voice low as she gazed lovingly at her daughter. "She must have spent all her energy playing on the farm today. She fell asleep as soon as she hit the bed."

Watching Carmen, Michael felt like he was admiring the most exotic and precious view. His gaze was filled with love.

She was the fruit of his and Sophia's love!

Carmen was also the continuation of their legacy. If he could, he would stare at her forever until the world ended.

Quietly, they both watched their daughter happily.

"Look at our beautiful little Carmen Fletcher." Michael softly nudged Carmen's pink and round cheek."She has your nose and your eyes, but she has my lips."

Sophia thought her daughter looked like her too; she was beautiful even when she was asleep.

Michael softly kissed Carmen's forehead. Carmen rolled over and opened her eyes blurrily. "Daddy…" she mumbled, as her tiny hands grabbed Michael's hand and hugged it like it was a doll.

Instantly, his heart melted when her tiny hands grabbed his. He lovingly admired the little hands that were much smaller than his own.

"Look; even our daughter's hands look beautiful."

Sophia looked down at Carmen's little hands. How adorable. She grabbed her phone, muted it and turned off the camera flash before secretly taking a photo.

She was just too cute!

After snapping the photo, Sophia reached down and kissed Carmen's tiny cheek.

She reached her hand out and placed it in Michael's palm, gently holding Carmen's hand. Then, Michael's hand turned and he held both Sophia's and Carmen's hands in his own.

At that moment, he gazed at Sophia before saying seriously, "The both of you suffered in the past because of me. From now on, I will not let that happen again. I promise to protect both of you."

Gazing at him, Sophia did not know what to say, but she thought his hand was exceptionally warm and dependable.

"Ahem!"

Suddenly, a loud cough could be heard. Turning around, Michael saw Cooper standing by the door with a dark expression, staring coldly at them.

"Alright, it's time for bed."

Michael carefully placed Carmen's hand under the covers before tucking them both in bed. He then dimmed the lights before quietly getting up and leaving the room.

A series of footsteps could be heard from the door as Michael and Cooper went back to their respective bedrooms.

The night was so quiet that the only thing she could hear was her own heartbeat.

While Carmen slept, Sophia had trouble sleeping. Michael was all she could think about.

She guessed that she had started to accept Michael and was prepared to give Carmen a perfect little family!

All her past memories were long gone. Despite that, she knew she had grown up without parents. Thus, she did not want her child to go through the same thing.

Carmen was still young so she had to give her a perfect home!

The next day, Carmen made a fuss as soon as she woke up. Even though they had brought along a nanny, Sophia still wanted to take care of Carmen herself, so she got her washed up and dressed.

Then, she proudly carried Carmen, whom she had tended to so well, to the dining hall for breakfast.

When breakfast was done, everyone prepared to go home. Sophia had packed up the berries she had picked yesterday while everyone packed their stuff. After that, they left and returned to Bayside City.

It was already noon when they arrived home. Meanwhile, Nathan was playing by himself at Villa No. 2. Recently, Nathan had started attending Bayside University and only came home during the weekends, sometimes not at all.

Besides Carmen and Hope, he barely paid any attention to anyone. He treated everyone coldly and naturally was cold to Sophia too.
