

MEDICAL GOD CHAPTER 458

The moment those words left Director Zhong's mouth, realization immediately dawned on his subordinates and they nodded profusely.

Taking advantage of the fact that Qin Jun and Lin Yueyao were still attending to the patient, Director Zhong rounded up his men and hastily left the operating theatre.

The moment they exited, Chief Editor Chu and many other family members quickly swarmed them. Amidst the crowd were the reporters holding cameras from just now.

"Doctor! How is my older brother? You guys promised me that he would be alright!"

Although Qin Jun was the one who had made the promise, all of the doctors were one and the same to Chief Editor Chu.

A serious look crept across Director Zhong's face as he declared, "You can be rest assured. The patient's condition has now stabilized. We're just putting him on the drip to give him some glucose now. He'll be able to come out soon."

Only then did the expression on Chief Editor's soften slightly. It was as though a huge weight had been lifted from his shoulders upon learning the news.

With the cameras still recording, Chief Editor Chu asked, "Although all was well in the end, it was still a very harrowing incident. Could you spare us some details?"

"The main reason this incident was an incredibly harrowing one was that there was a delay time between the diagnosis and sending the patient here."

“The patient fell unconscious after he was placed under the care of People’s Hospital’s Dr. Lin Yueyao. When that happened, she rescued him based on Internal Medicine procedures. As a result, the patient ingested some painkillers by mistake. This eventually led to his convulsions and shock.”

“By the time the patient was sent to us, he could barely open his mouth. If it had been any other ordinary dentist, he would have definitely been stumped. But luckily for the patient, I was on duty. I managed to keep his mouth open and conducted the surgery safely.”

After Director Zhong finished, Chief Editor Chu broke into smiles. So it was Dr. Lin’s fault!

If it hadn’t been for Director Zhong, brother would have been done for!

He hastily rushed forward and grabbed Director Zhong’s hand. “Director Zhong, thank you so much for saving my older brother! You can be rest assured. I’ll make sure your story hits the papers!”

A brief smile played on Director Zhong’s lips. “Fame isn’t really that important to me. My goal has always been to save the patient. And that certainly hasn’t changed.”

A look of awe and admiration flashed across Chief Editor Chu’s face as he started clapping wildly. Turning to the reporters, he barked, “Jot it down! Write down everything he just said!”

Director Zhong smiled. “Alright, please excuse me. I still have other patients to attend to.”

With that, Director Zhong turned and left.

In truth, there wasn’t any other patient that he had to go attend to. He was really just fleeing the scene as he had no idea how to go into detail about the surgical procedure. After all, he hadn’t been the one who saved the patient.

If they were to continue to dig deeper, his lie might have been exposed. Although the reporters certainly wouldn't have noticed the loopholes, other colleagues in the field might when they read the story.

How was a surgery in the oral cavity supposed to be carried out with the patient in shock and keeping his mouth shut? This had always been a great hurdle stumping many dentists. If he were to go into detail, he was bound to be questioned by many other people in the field. His lies would have then been very easily exposed.

Chief Editor Chu marveled, "This is what a true doctor is supposed to be like! I want you guys to immediately get to work on this story when we get back! This goes on the headlines tomorrow!"

When Qin Jun and Lin Yueyao brought the patient out, Chief Editor Chu and the other family members quickly pushed the patient to the inpatient department. They didn't even bother to acknowledge or even thank Lin Yueyao or Qin Jun.

However, Lin Yueyao wasn't bothered at all. After all, it was normal for family members to have their attention completely fixed on the patient. And this was what doctors were supposed to do. They didn't need the family members' gratitude.

Furthermore, Qin Jun had been the one who saved the day in the end. I never expected him to be quite a good doctor.
