

MEDICAL GOD CHAPTER 658

Whether to pre-record the program or to go live, Qin Jun was fine with either format.

He only agreed to be on this show because he wanted to repay Zhao Likun's kindness, and at the same time, introduce Traditional Chinese Medicine to a greater audience.

He was not concerned whether this show would make him famous or not.

Zhao Likun nodded. As long as Qin Jun agreed, then they could proceed with the original broadcast format.

Director Gao then explained to Qin Jun, "The Chinese Medicine Forum will be something like what we've gone through today. Our patients, who would be coming from all over the country, suffer from all sorts of complicated diseases. I hope you're prepared for this."

Qin Jun nodded. The director's explanation made sense. It would not be necessary for the production team to gather so many specialists here only to treat patients with minor problems like cough and cold.

Obviously, they were there to solve complicated medical problems.

"Mr. Qin, should I brief you on the patients' profiles in advance so you can prepare beforehand?"

Director Gao still had reservations about Qin Jun. What if he could not figure out the proper treatment for the patients? The audience members could sometimes be quite merciless if anything went wrong.

Though he had witnessed Qin Jun's medical skills, Director Gao was still afraid that he might not rise to the challenge. More importantly, he did not want to take the blame for any mistakes that might happen during the live session.

Besides the Olympics Games and the Lunar New Year celebration, CCTV rarely had live telecast programs.

If The Chinese Medicine Forum were to go live, it would be unprecedented. Hence, Director Gao had to make sure everything was under his control.

Of course, Director Gao was not trying to help Qin Jun cheat behind the camera. He just wanted him to have enough time to prepare in advance.

Qin Jun shook his head, "No thanks. We shall go live as it is."

Qin Jun felt there was no need to prepare anything beforehand. He would treat these cases as if they were his patients in his medical center.

"Alright, Mr. Qin. Our audience in the studio will be mostly people from the industry. Do you have any friends who wish to come? Do you need tickets?"

Qin Jun answered, "Sure. Give me a few tickets then."

He thought it would be a great experience for Ye Wan'er and the gang to be here. He would also want to invite Lin Yueyao over.

After collecting the tickets, Qin Jun went out for dinner. Since the show was about to start in a couple of hours, he did not go too far away from the television station. He still needed to get back to the studio to do his hair and makeup.

Since everyone agreed to include Qin Jun in the panel, and they had decided to go live, the station started promoting the television program.

The target audience was mainly the elderly folks as they were big fans of shows that focused on health and wellbeing.

Several rounds of promotion had successfully captured the audience's attention. The show also became the talk of the town of people in showbiz.

"Live telecast? The production team must be under a lot of pressure. I wonder who will lead the panel of The Chinese Medicine Forum?"

"Master Huang Wenjin will be leading the panel. They announced it in their previous promo video. He's one of the top Chinese physicians in the country."

"Didn't you know Master Huang had passed away at the age of 90 just a few days ago? They almost canceled the program."

"Oh, really? Then who's going to take over if Master Huang is not around anymore?"

"Not sure. I don't think they explained that in detail in the latest promo video, but I heard it's someone called Master Qin?"

"Master what? He better not be a conman!"

Everyone eagerly discussed The Chinese Medicine Forum when the television station released the new promotional video.

They were particularly curious about the new head of the panel.
