

MEDICAL GOD CHAPTER 716

Tang Jianqiang chuckled, "Dad, authentic foie gras and caviar can only be eaten at restaurants in France. This place probably doesn't serve them so please make do with it and just have a try."

Tang Wen snorted before he reluctantly picked up his chopsticks to start eating.

Seafood was the main theme for the dishes on the table and great attention had been paid to the details. There were hot and cold dishes with a good mix of meat and vegetables, sweet and savory.

In a truly high-end restaurant, it was not about picking the most expensive dishes, but it was how comfortable they made their customers feel.

The dishes were tasty and there was a mix of different cuisines served which incorporated preparation methods from different countries as they served sashimi and many more.

Tang Wen could only sulk as he was not able to pick any faults with the food.

During the meal, Tang Wen asked, "What are Yueyao and Jun doing now? Are they practicing medicine?"

Tang Min nodded, "Our children loves medicine and they are doctors. How about your son? Is he a doctor too?"

Tang Wen nodded with a smug look on his face. "That's right. Jianqiang dreamt of being a doctor since he was young and now his wish has come true. He practices Chinese medicine and is currently the director of the Chinese Medicine Association."

Tang Wen looked very pleased. His son's success was his proudest achievement.

Tang Min gasped, "Jianqiang must be really capable to be a director of the Chinese Medicine Association at such a young age. His future prospects look encouraging."

Tang Jianqiang smiled and pretended to be modest, "It's really nothing. It was mainly because I studied very hard at school and managed to learn from various famous doctors. I will only be able to improve if I keep having the urge to learn. Both of you are also in the same industry? We used to speak about it casually but I can

't believe that everyone turned out to be doctors. It's alright if you are not successful now, you just have to continue to work hard. Given your age, if you get the chance to practice clinical medicine, it is already quite a feat. Thinking back to when I was about twenty-five, I did my internship for quite a while before I was finally promoted to a resident. Both of you are residents, right?"

Lin Yueyao just smiled in response, "I'm currently a director at People's Hospital."

Tang Jianqiang's face instantly hardened and he said, "Director? You must be joking! I was thirty years old when I became director but you are only twenty-five years old this year, right?"

Medical students typically took five years in school and given Lin Yueyao's age, she couldn't have graduated from school that long ago. Normally at that stage, becoming a resident would be one's only aim.

It was very impressive to become a resident because if they performed well enough, they had the chance to become a deputy director in the future.

In spite of that, it was difficult as only one would be selected from a hundred candidates, much less so to become a director. That was almost impossible unless she had made a significant contribution.

Lin Yueyao is only twenty-five and she is already a director?

Lin Yueyao chuckled, "Is that very surprising?"

Tang Jianqiang loved to show off and it was pretty satisfying to watch his reaction when she revealed her position.

Tang Min said, "My Yueyao was very lucky. She performed several major operations with a few famous specialists and was given a special promotion."

Tang Min spoke humbly and did not appear to be putting on a pretense, which made her seem especially sophisticated.

Tang Jianqiang nodded, "I see, so it was your mentors that helped you. You must be very lucky however, you are still not as qualified so you have to continue to work hard and keep improving on yourself. Now that you have some achievement, don't be too complacent because you still have a long way to go."
