

Mission To Remarry Chapter 763

After Lucian brought Estella to wash her hands, they came out and sat at the dining table.

They sat at the same side of the table, leaving Aubree alone on the opposite side. It was clear as day that they were giving her the cold shoulder.

Feeling their aversion toward herself, Aubree dug her nails into her palm quietly to suppress her boiling rage. "Essie, did you have fun with your daddy today?" she asked with a nonchalant smile.

Let's see if the father-daughter duo is going to tell me the truth!

Naturally, Estella turned a deaf ear to her question, and Lucian merely glanced at her meaningfully, looking as if he had seen through something.

Aubree shuddered involuntarily and steeled herself to carry on with the one-sided conversation. "I figure Essie probably had nothing to play with when she was staying at the office with you. You're always busy with work, so I'm worried she might be bored."

After saying that, she turned to Estella and continued with a smile tugging at her lips, "Let's play together later, okay? I bought a lot of games for you today."

her lips

thought that this girl is a mute. But it turns out that Little Mute has a silver as she went on, "What do put down the fork in her that Estella wanted to go upstairs to escape Aubree's ingratiating, but seemed somewhat upset to see her father reject have time to play games with Essie, you should lip and argued her case in a pitiful state. "I just want to make up to Essie. I didn't have much time to spend with her in the past, and I his tone became even frostier as he replied, "There is no need for that. You may not have the chance to get along with Essie again in the future, so you don't have to know her with those words that she would not have the chance to become Estella's she still felt a stab in her

I