

Mission To Remarry Chapter 935

Aubree quickly grew impatient as the group of four didn't return to their tent even after a long while. She whipped out her phone and sent the private detective a message: Where are you?

Logically, he should have arrived before her, but Aubree hadn't noticed anyone else around when she scanned her surroundings earlier.

Where on earth did he go? What a useless man! She furrowed her brows in dismay. Seconds later, her phone screen lit up with a response from the private detective: Look up.

The puzzled woman lifted her head and noticed that the leaves of a nearby tree appeared to be rustling. In the next second, she caught sight of a camera flash.

Aubree frowned in displeasure and lowered her head as she typed a reply: Keep a close eye on them! Take pictures if anything strange happens and send them to me.

The private detective assented without hesitation. After that, Aubree cast one last glance in the direction of Roxanne and her kids before slowly driving away.

If it was possible, she'd love to see Roxanne and her kids writhing in pain with her own eyes, but alas, the place she was at was not inconspicuous enough.

There was a chance she might be discovered if she continued to stay there, and if that happened, she'd end up losing more than she gained.

Aubree had hired the private detective, who would feel after drinking the water was enough to new bacterium so that she could teach a newly discovered bacteria, so there was no cure

Aubree, for she wanted nothing more than to see them bring them extreme pain and wasn't capable of enough for Aubree to quell her hatred, it could still like to see how you'll be able to save them insidious glint flashed across Aubree's drinks that water, that wretched remained oblivious to what Aubree had done, and the children were still enjoying themselves to the were in cahoots with one another and stood against their sister, and they ended up splitting up. The children formed three factions and drenched each other in water the water got on Roxanne, bringing about a cooling sensation indulging themselves in fun, so she said nothing and allowed them carefully inched her way toward the stream, wanting to get in the water