

Mr. Ford Is Jealous by Boat of Peaches Chapter 1147

"Yes," said the doctor, "We found that her body must've been treated with great care, and it recovered well. The baby is very healthy. This is indeed unprecedented... a miracle."

Miguel told Stella about it immediately.

He still remembered her expression when she learned about it.

At first, she was dumbfounded, as if in disbelief.

After a long time, she put her hand on her stomach and looked down, unable to tell what she was feeling.

Just when she thought she would have to live like this for the rest of her life, God blessed her with such a gift.

She felt as if her whole body had been injected with a powerful life force, especially when she heard the doctor say that there were two fetal hearts which meant she had twins.

Having a home was what she wanted the most.

And the most important thing about home was family.

From that day on, Stella began to cooperate with the treatment actively.

She is getting better day by day, both physically and mentally.

Her babies were healthy. Later, they found that the twins were a boy and a girl.

Miguel couldn't forget the contented and serene look on Stella's face the first time she looked at the ultrasound image of her babies.

He knew he shouldn't have any feelings for her. He only treated her as his older sister, like how Roger did.

But somehow, every time he saw her, he had the illusion that his heart was racing.

This was why he was unwilling to let the twins address him as uncle after she gave birth to them.

In the end, the twins called him "Brother."

Although it made him a little unsatisfied, he just let them realized what they might have to face next when he heard the news from Ahn City.

If they went back to Ahn City, they might run into Weston.

That man...

Although they chose not to hear anything about him all these years, he was still the father of the twins...

Stella knew what he was thinking and said nonchalantly, "Miguel, I am not the same person I was. Moreover, Ahn City is so big. We won't necessarily run into him, and even if we do, there's nothing to be afraid of."

She stood up and looked into his eyes. "No one can force me to do anything now."

Three years of growth had completely transformed her.

Because of the children in her womb, she drew unprecedented strength and honed her courage.

She wanted her children to be proud of her, and she couldn't afford to be a parasite that only relied on others.

She had something she was good at. In just three years, she became an internationally acclaimed piano virtuoso.

At one point, she even broke the prejudice of foreigners against people of her kind, garnered awards in major competitions, and became the well-deserved best pianist with absolute talent and strength.

Stella knew she could only protect her children if she grew in stature.

She would never again let anyone or anything hurt her family.

Absolutely not.

Compassvale was a city with good weather all year long.

Being there for three years, the one thing Stella felt the most sentimental about was the slow pace.

As a single mother, life was hard wherever she went.

It was fortunate that Miguel had helped her a lot in the initial stage, at least during her pregnancy, and provided her with a reassuring environment.

She later learned that the old man Roger met in the delta was part of his biological parents' family.

He was Miguel and Roger's grandfather.

Their parents, too, had their own sad story.

"More than ten years ago, my father fell in love with my mother, but my grandfather disapproved of their relationship and tried to break up the couple. My father was an exchange student, and my mother was a local of Ahn City. They fell in love at first sight and have been dating behind my grandfather's back since then.

suicide.

Thus, he hadn't even met Roger, not even once.

In fact, he was even more familiar with Stella. Because of Roger's last wish, Miguel also treated her as his sister. Grandpa's intention, too, was to treat Stella as the young lady of the family. He wanted to compensate her for everything he couldn't do for Roger.

Although she was a very determined woman, Stella decided that she'd accept their help for a while.

After giving birth to the twin boy and girl, she soon got ready to perform.

She knew she was taking advantage of the opportunities accorded by the Gracia family, but she repaid them tenfold later.

All around the world, Stella's incredible talent on the piano was an indisputable fact.

She even gained the adoration of the Queen.

She soon became the new celebrity that the other stars in the entertainment circle would talk about, thus gaining herself a great reputation and fame.

But she didn't stop there or intend to sit on her laurels.

In addition to winning the Golden Wheat Award in piano, she also had a deep knowledge of dance.

Thus, in a span of just three years, the name Cicily gained international acclaim.

It was the name Miguel picked for her.

Cicily, blind of self beauty.

It was how he felt about her.

The only thing was that he did not expect that the meaning of the name would spread through the circle.

Many people knew that the beautiful pianist, Cicily, possessed beauty she was unaware of.

It was even so popular that, at one point, parents often used this name when naming their children.

"Today's performance was a success!"

In Infinity Hall, a performer walked to Stella and gave her a warm hug. "Cicily, you are such a miracle!"

Stella was the first from her nation to stand on the stage as the youngest performer in Infinity Hall.

Her graceful dance performance and dexterity on the piano moved foreigners who weren't shy about expressing their emotions.

After a while, he excitedly invited her. "Cicily, I have asked you out many times, can you please have dinner with me this time?"

Stella always remained single, although she had children.

A number of gentlemen pursued her over the years.

Edward was one of them.

This man had been attending every show since her first tour. A massive fan in his own right, he was acquainted with her playing style and was extremely appreciative of her.

Stella had no plans to start a relationship at the moment, however.

She shook her head and smiled at him, saying, "Thank you for your affection, but I simply have no intention to start a romantic relationship at the moment. I'm really sorry.'

Edward was very disappointed. "Why? Cicily, you are so charming and young. Are you going to waste your great youth on children?"

Stella frowned. "I don't think it's a waste to be concerned about my children, I'd be in a relationship if I wanted to, but it'll not be with you."

This was the first time she had said something so obvious, even sounding rather aggressive in her rejection.

She had always refused politely before.

Edward smiled and touched his nose. "Okay, Cicily, but I won't give up..."

Just as the words escaped his mouth, two small children suddenly hopped to her.

"Mommy!"

Elias hugged Stella's left leg while Emma held her hand. "Congratulations, Mommy!"

The little one would congratulate her at the end of every performance.

Stella smiled in return, stroked their hair, and squatted in front of them.

"Why are you up here? Didn't I tell Miguel to take you guys outside to wait for me?"

Sucking her thumb, Emma pointed to Edward with her finger and then looked at Miguel, who was standing not far away.

Stella understood at once.

Miguel had deliberately let them come to rescue her.

Instead of feeling embarrassed, however, Edward became more enthusiastic, greeting the two children. "So cute! Your children look so much like you!"

Stella smiled and did not say anything.

In fact, they both looked more like Weston, especially their delicate eyebrows, a feature inherited by the males of the Ford family.

We

Anyway, the children were still young, so their faces were chubby, bearing some resemblance to her.

With that said, they couldn't be identified as Weston's children at a glance.

Regardless, there were still many similarities if they looked carefully.

It was not hard to tell that the children would greatly resemble Weston growing up.

"Thank you, Edward. I shall bring my children to dinner now."

"If you don't mind, can I invite you and your children to dine with me?"

Stella shook her head, "That won't be necessary.

"I already have a date with someone," she added with a smile.

Edward was a little taken aback.

He glanced in the direction of the door.

Miguel was standing at the end of the golden hall, wearing a white suit.

He took another look at Stella's attire today. Her white dress made her look like an angel that had descended into the mortal world.

This woman didn't like to wear too much makeup. For such occasions, she would only put on a light film of makeup.

Edward found her very enchanting every time he saw her. He adored the classical beauty of a foreign lady.

"Why are you willing to date someone else but not give me a chance? I know this man. His name is Miguel, the heir of the Garcia family. I heard that the Garcia family only considers you as an adopted daughter. You should be like siblings..."

"You think too much, Mr. Edward."

Her face suddenly changed, and she said to him, "We are a family. Why can't a family have dinner together? I'm going to have dinner with him with my children.

Goodbye."

After saying that, she turned around and left.

Edward looked resentfully at her as she left, knowing he had said the wrong thing.

But he did not know what he had said wrong.

He seemed to have irritated Stella, but what he said wasn't wrong either.

However, he did not know that his words just now reminded Stella of the feelings Roger had for her when he was alive.

She had never told anyone about it except for Riley, mainly because Weston knew about Roger's feelings for her. Thus, he was hostile to Roger and vowed never to let him go.

It was once her darkest nightmare.

To her, Roger was the most important person in this world.

At least until the birth of her two children, he was her most important family member.

But because of this, she could only push him away from her.

This action had also caused Weston to drive him to the brink.

Whenever she thought of the past, a sharp pain would still sting her heart.

Miguel keenly noticed that something was wrong with her and rushed forward to take Emma from her arms.

He looked at Stella, asking, "What's wrong with you? Did he say something to you just now?"

She shook her head. "It's nothing."

Seeing that she was fine, Miguel said, "I've booked the restaurant on the top floor to celebrate your performance – today."

The two laughed and joked as they walked outside before arriving at the restaurant.

The two little ones were already fist-pumping, their stomach growling with hunger.

Miguel ordered a steak, carefully cut it into small pieces, and exchanged them with the one in front of Stella.

While watching his movements, Stella was in a bit of a daze.

It suddenly occurred to her that Weston would habitually do the same thing.

"Does this denote the character of a gentleman?"
