Chapter 365

Looking at that person, Lily answered thoughtfully, "It doesn't mean much to whoever the author is. This test is about analyzing the composition and the pros and cons of the work, not who created it."

"Then, if you remove the labels and focus on the two creations themselves, will your answer be the same as now?" she asked rhetorically.

That question caught people's attention, and they engaged in careful thought. If there were no labels, it was very likely that the answer would still be different.

When answering the questions, they wondered if this was really Mr. Parker's work or one of their challenges.

After spending so much time and energy, no one thought that thinking about whose work it was would deviate from the game's core.

Now, her words have convinced most people.

However, there is always dissatisfaction.

"Excuse me, Ms. Christian. What you said was good, but you're so young and could think so well. Are you really talented and intelligent, or have you been in contact with similar things before?"

His question was full of maliciousness. It seemed to be a common question, but in fact, he was saying that she relied on connections.

Indirectly, he meant that she already knew the questions in advance, which was why she could answer so well.

Looking deeply at him, Lily replied, "Then you're presumptuous. Not only that, but you're also a bit ignorant.

"As far as I know, there's no direct relationship between knowledge and age. Some people are young, but they are knowledgeable and wise. Some people are older, but they are shallow and live under a rock. Of course, I'm not talking about you. I just want to say that a person's tolerance has little to do with age. Also, I think, if you're here, it shouldn't be the latter."

She smiled and said it calmly, but her words were neither humble nor arrogant. It was obviously mocking his shallow knowledge, but in the end, she gave him some face and did not want to make him too embarrassed.

His face and neck were bright red with anger, yet he was speechless.

Furthermore, to continue the discourse would portray him as ignorant, and he was not challenging her, but rather Mr. Parker and the entire competition.

"This competition was complete and successful, and it allowed us to see that there are so many talents in our fragrance business. I believe that in this field, everyone will be able to create a world of their own! I believe there will be more excellent work in the future! I'm pleased to announce that this competition is over, and I will contact the winners to collect the prizes and trophies later."

After the invigilator finished speaking, this competition finally came to an end.

Lily breathed a sigh of relief but felt she would never participate in this type of competition again.

Research and development were a peace of mind.

Socializing, on the other hand, was a pure headache!

"Ms. Christian!"

After the game, and before she could leave, someone stopped her, "Mr. Parker wants to see you. Please come with me."

Lily did not know what he meant, but after all, they were still in the arena.

After the kidnapping, the recent security and protection measures had been comprehensive, so it would never be like the last time.

Following that person to the office, Lily saw Mr. Parker sitting inside after the door had opened. He watched Lily walk in front of him and motioned her to sit down.

"Ms. Christian, you really impressed me," Mr. Parker's body leaned forward a little. Although his tone was not admirable, it was affirmative.
