

Spoiled by Mr. Russell Chapter 661

"You dare claim you didn't make the candles?"

Henry questioned confidently, knowing he had sufficient evidence.

"This lab testing report has exposed you. It says here that a poisonous substance was inside the candles. How can you still try to lie your way out of it?"

"What a joke," Lily laughed coldly, "Just because the candle contained a poisonous substance, it means I was the one who did it? Not to mention whether there was what you claimed as poison in the candle. Why do you insist that I poisoned it even if it does?"

Henry looked like he had expected Lily to say this. He continued, "I knew you wouldn't admit it. Don't worry. I have enough proof to show that you were the one who made the candles. You've also admitted that you gave the candles to Justin personally. Does that mean you're accusing Justin if it wasn't you?"

"Also!"

Henry turned and signaled his subordinate to bring a box over. He took it and showed it to everyone in the room, "This box contains the unused candles in my father's room. These candles contained a small dose of the poison. Even though they don't cause immediate death, continuous use will end with terrifying results."

Lily expected this.

matter how often they experimented, the results would be the same. She knew exactly won't be the man from bringing the candles his eyes and remarked, "Whether they were poisonous or not had you still trying

the candles my father used, and now you're two boxes of candles but not the others. I'm sure you know exactly where they he noticed Lily's unwavering attitude. She was not at all nervous, even when in her control, and she was confident he could not

"Of course, I'm sure!"

to hold back his nervousness and continued, "These were in my father's room. They remained unused, and they were responsible for his death! Lily, I'm fact that you're my niece? If you admit it's just an impulsive mistake, you will have to pay your dues according to know who will end up